FIREMEN REACH CRUCIAL HOUR

Railroad Managers Indicate End of Negotiations and Wait for "Strike to Come On."

TRUCE NOW AT AN END

Carter Says Railroads Want to Run Loose Figures in Evidence and Men Won't Have It.

STRIKE ORDER SENT OUT

In the Hands of the Locals Now, but Held for Release—Judge Knapp Coming Back to Get Final Word.

Whether or not the more than 30,000 firemen employed on fifty-four railroads operating east of Chicago are to strike will probably be settled to-night. By that time, it is expected, Judge Martin A. Knapp of the United States Commerce Court, and G. W. W. Hanger, Acting United States Commissioner of Labor, will have completed their labors as mediators between the firemen and the railroads. Judge Knapp will return from Washington to-day, and will confer immediately with the Conference Committee of Railroad Managers. From them he will go to the Committee of Firemen in the Broadway Central Hotel.

On what word he carries from the managers to the firemen depends the question of a strike, and should this word be unsatisfactory to the members of the Firemen's Adjustment Committee, who are empowered to act for their brethren, it is probable that the strike order will be issued at once.

The firemen demand that their differences with the various roads be arbitrated under the Erdman act. They have already declined to consider a modification of the provisions of this act to enlarge the group of arbitrators to six, and it is believed that nothing but complete surrender on this point by the railroads involved can prevent a strike.

A press and statistical bureau in Washington, D. C., whose special purpose is to prepare documents for the use of arbitration boards, is at the bottom of the present deadlock between the managers of the fifty-four railroads operating east of Chicago and the 30,000 firemen employed in operating them, according to assertions made by W. S. Carter, leader of the firemen, at the firemen's hadquarters, in the Broadway Central Hotel, last night.

Mr. Carter says the railroads have a vast amount of this statistical information which they are intent upon entering as evidence and which the firemen are equally intent upon shutting out.

Mr. Carter says his men are fighting doggedly for arbitration under the Erdman act because they believe the railroads will never dare to bring in this bulk of documents if they have to swear to their accuracy and submit to cross-examination of their witnesses, with the liability of their punishment for perjury if the documents should be false.

The work of the press bureau in Washington, to whose activities Mr. Carter attributes the failure of the managers and the men to get together, caused many bitter comments among the firemen's Executive Committee.

Mr. Carter got in touch with President Warren S. Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers by telegraph, and from Mr. Stone he obtained authority to repudiate the assertions of the press bureau, so far as they concerned the engineers, one of the assertions being that the engineers had received $1,000,000 in back pay as the result of the report of the seven arbitrators.

"Not only have the engineers received no back pay," said Mr. Carter, "but the situation is so bad that President Stone has called for another meeting of the Arbitration Board, so that he can report to it how sadly its provisions have been carried out."

Mr. Carter insisted that the very reason the firemen are deadlocking to force arbitration under the Erdman act was that railroad men in general had learned a lesson from the experience of the engineers.

To his interview Mr. Carter added this statement:

> With regard to the public statements by the railroad companies wherein it is said that the engineers are satisfied and have been benefited by arbitration under the railroads' plan, and that the railroads have paid $1,000,000 in back pay, &c., I am advised by Grand Chief Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers that while it has been ten months since they agreed to arbitrate and seven months since the hearings were closed, and given to the Arbitration Board for a decision, the award of that board has not yet been put into effect, except on one railroad, and it has been found necessary to request the Engineers' Arbitration Board to again meet and finally decide what they really did mean by the award that they handed down. This should convince all of the deception being practiced upon the public through the statements that are being sent out by telegraphic news agencies throughout the country, wherein it is represented that great sums of money have been paid to the engineers because of the award.

The present truce between the railroad managers and the firemen, which was made to permit Judge Knapp to visit Washington, was fixed by joint agreement, it was learned last night, to terminate at noon on Monday.

"We have done everything possible to avert the strike," said one member of the railroad managers' committee last night, "and now out of courtesy to Judge Knapp we cannot move until Monday noon. After that our policy will be simply to let the strike come on."

The railroad managers' conference committee, of which Elisha Lee is Chairman, has been called together for a special meeting this morning at 9 o'clock. It is thought that the final communication to the firemen will be drawn up at this meeting and delivered at noon through Judge Knapp.

The firemen have a strike order already out which has been "held for release." As it calls upon the men "to withdraw peaceably" it is thought that two days will be required after it is issued for firemen to comply fully with the terms.

President W. G. Besler of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at the Waldorf last night, treated lightly the contentions of the firemen that they could stop traffic on the Eastern roads.

"Any husky coal wagon man, or any laborer who can shovel coal, can do a fireman's work," said he. "The only preliminary instruction a fireman gets is that a green man is taken once over the road by an experienced man, after which he is a full-fledged fireman."

President Besler believes the threatened strike will not occur, but, if it does, the roads will be run without any great difficulty.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Judge Martin A. Knapp of the Commerce Court left here late to-night for New York. When asked if he believed that the controversy would be amicably adjusted, Judge Knapp said:

"One instinctively hopes that some way may yet be found to avert such a calamity as a strike of the firemen would entail. Just how it will be avoided, however, no one can say."

ARREST "MILLIONAIRE KID."

Crease Charged with Robbing the Royal Bank of Canada.

Jack C. Crease, a stocky, dark-complexioned youth, attired in a wonderful bearskin coat, brown suit of latest cut, and irreproachable linen, and wearing an air of easy confidence, was locked up in the Greenwich Street Station late last night after Pinkerton detectives had brought him here on a late train from Belmont, Mass. Crease, who says he is 19 years old and looks 24 or 25, is known to the police as "the second of those millionaire kids."

The first of the "kids" is best known as Joe Wood. His real name is said to be William Tesrey. He was arrested here last week after Pinkertons had guessed his identity. He had caused the arrest of two companions, whom he accused of robbing him.

Charles R. Hopkins, paying teller of the Royal Bank of Canada in its local branch, at 35 Cedar Street, was complainant against Crease. The youngster, with Tesrey, is accused of having forged and cashed drafts on the Royal Bank of Canada for $3,400. According to the police, the youths, who were bank clerks in Halifax, conceived the plan of forging drafts made out to themselves, addressing them to this city, and then coming here to cash them.

Young Crease took his arrest lightly, and did not demand that the process of extradition be gone through, announcing in Belmont that he was ready to come here at once.

GLUCK SINGS ON EAST SIDE.

Metropolitan Artiste Appears at Music School Settlement.

Alma Gluck, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, surprised the children of the east side who make up the senior orchestra of the Music School Settlement, in Third Street, by going down to sing at their regular Sunday morning rehearsal yesterday. Mme. Gluck was at the orchestra rehearsal the week before, when she went to the school with Mrs. Rudolph E. Schirmer of the advisory board, and was so impressed by her visit, she told David Mannes, the Director, afterward, that she wanted to show her appreciation of their work. So she had a prompt opportunity.

No announcement was made of Mme. Gluck's coming, and the orchestra and the audience of friends and neighbors which fill the school's auditorium every Sunday forenoon, met her on the friendly basis of fellow-music lovers. She sang eight numbers, and repeated one of them, which, to her evident enjoyment, was a special favorite with the listeners as with her.

"It is wonderful what is being done here," said Mme. Gluck, while she lingered to talk with some of the young musicians. "If it were only teaching them to be players that would not be so great; but here, in a part of the city where poverty and hard life and bad surroundings are bound to breed misery and crime, is this place that gives the good in these young people a chance to develop which it otherwise could not have."

NOW WANTS HER CHILDREN.

Mrs. Marcus, Who Left Them and Husband, Appeals to Court.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Feb. 16.—Mrs. Dorothy Cooksey Marcus, the young wife of William Elder Marcus, Jr., a son of the head of the New York jewelry firm of Marcus & Co., who left her husband and her baby daughters, Linda, now 3 years old, and Jane, 2, one day last Summer, saying that she had never loved her husband and had no fondness for her children, now apparently is desirous of regaining possession of the little ones, even though she has sought no reconciliation with her husband. She has summoned her husband to bring the children before Vice Chancellor Stevens in Newark on March 4, when she will begin a fight for the custody of her daughters.

In her petition to the court for custody of the children Mrs. Marcus says that while traveling in Europe with her father, George B. Cooksey, a wealthy retired ranch owner of Santa Barbara, Cal., following her desertion of her husband, she reached the conclusion that it would be for the best interests of the children were she to care for them. She says she has the means to educate her daughters in a manner befitting their station in life, and that she now has the desire to do so. She cannot stand the rigorous Winters of this climate, and wants to take the children with her to her father's home in California.

When she left her husband Mrs. Marcus said that she believed her lack of love for her children was inherited, as her mother had manifested the same lack of feeling toward her children. As for her husband, Mrs. Marcus said she had married him as the result of a girlish impulse, and that as she did not love him life with him had grown unendurable.

IMMIGRATION BILL UP TO-DAY.

Repassage by Both Houses Over Veto Is Sure, Says Dillingham.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Senator William P. Dillingham of Vermont, a prominent member of the Committee on Immigration, and Representative John L. Burnett of Alabama, Chairman of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, conferred to-day on plans for passing the Immigration bill over the President's veto. Mr. Dillingham reported that only nine Republican Senators voted against the literacy test, on which the veto was based, and that all the others would vote to override the President.

Mr. Burnett had made a canvass of the situation in the House, and he reported that not one Republican who had voted for the bill on its passage would vote against it now out of respect for the President. The real test vote in the House, he said, was 177 to 74—a safe two-thirds, and that vote he thought could be relied on when the bill comes up for repassage, "the objections of the President of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding."

The bill will be called up by Senator Lodge to-morrow, and it will be sent to the House as quickly as debate permits. When the bill will come up in the House is doubtful, but Mr. Burnett thought a rule would give it precedence twenty-four hours after it passes the Senate.

MRS. MARIE HENDERSON SHOT

Accidentally Wonded by Her Daughter Who Thought Her a Burglar.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 16.—Mrs. Marie Henderson, former wife of W. J. Henderson, musical critic of The New York Sun, was accidentally shot here to-night by her daughter, Mrs. F. H. Petrie, who thought her mother was a burglar. The wound was slight and she will recover.

Mrs. Petrie, who is ill, was alone in her apartments to-night when her mother went to visit her. Mrs. Henderson found the door locked and received no response when she rang. Seizing a pitcher, which stood in the hallway, she hurled it through the glass panel in the door, to unfasten the catch on the inside, believing her daughter was dangerously ill.

As Mrs. Henderson fumbled with the lock her daughter fired through the door. The bullet struck Mrs. Henderson in the side. Mrs. Petrie fainted and is still prostrated.

NEW YORKER CHOSEN BRITISH CHIEF RABBI

Jewish Electoral College Meeting in London Selects the Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Hertz.

298 VOTES TO 39 FOR RIVAL

A Native of Hungary, Dr. Hertz Was Educated in New York Institutions —Going to England in March.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—After an interregnum of eighteen months and a spirited contest between candidates, the Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Hertz of New York was to-day elected Chief Rabbi of the United Hebrew Congregations of the British Empire at a meeting of the Electoral College, presided over by Lord Rothschild, President of the United Synagogue.

Only after a session that lasted six hours was the choice of Dr. Hertz made. The scene when the result was announced was one to be remembered, the electors in a dramatic scene vowing that they would be loyal to their new spiritual chief.

The delegates numbered more than 100, representing the synagogues of not only the United Kingdom, but also Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and other parts of the empire.

The two candidates to be voted for were Dr. Hertz and the Rev. Dr. Hyamson, head of the Jewish Ecclesiastical Court in London, who had performed the duties of the Chief Rabbinate since the death of the Rev. Dr. Hermann Adler.

The ballot resulted in Dr. Hertz receiving 298 votes from 56 delegates, while Dr. Hyamson received 39 votes from 27 delegates. Ten delegates abstained from voting. Among those who supported Dr. Hertz was the Rev. Dr. Elkan Adler, brother of the late Chief Rabbi.

A keen controversy had arisen among the committees over the rival claims of adherents of Drs. Hertz and Hyamson, and an effort was made at to-day's meeting to postpone the election. After a long discussion a motion for such postponement was defeated by an overwhelming majority.

Before the voting began the question was raised as to the respective qualifications of Dr. Hertz and Dr. Hyamson, some criticism being made of Dr. Hyamson's knowledge of rabbinical law as compared with that of Dr. Hertz. On the other hand, Dr. Hyamson's claim was defended on the ground of his long association with the late Chief Rabbi and his fulfillment of many duties of the office.

The election of Dr. Hertz to the post was due to a great extent to Lord Rothschild, who repeatedly urged the necessity of filling the vacant post at the earliest possible moment.

Lord Rothschild opened the proceedings with a reference to the significant character of the meeting and disposed of the assertions of unfitness that had been made against the chosen candidate of the Selection Committee. He also referred to the statement that Dr. Hertz had been adopted as a candidate on the recommendation of Lord Milner. Correspondence was read from Lord Milner himself, proving the baselessness of this statement.

Dr. Hertz's salary as Chief Rabbi will be $10,000 a year, out of which he provides the expenses of his office, such as the payment of a secretary's salary. His residence must be near the East End, London. He will be President of the Jewish Court, where civil and ecclesiastical cases concerning the Jews are heard.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Hertz, rabbi of the Synagogue Orach Chaim, at Ninety-fifth Street and Lexington Avenue, who was chosen Chief Rabbi of Great Britain yesterday, received last evening official word of his election by a cable message to his home, 9 East Ninety-seventh Street.

Dr. Hertz was unwilling to make any statement concerning his election or his plans beyond saying that he had accepted the office and would leave for England very soon, probably in March.

Dr. Hertz was born in Hungary in 1872, and came to this city in 1884. He was educated at the College of the City of New York and Columbia University, receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the latter institution. He received his rabbinical training at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in this city, and was its first graduate rabbi.

For two years he had charge of the congregation Adas Jeshurun in Syracuse. From there he went in 1897 to South Africa, where, for thirteen years, he was rabbi of the Jewish congregation at Johannesburg. He was expelled from the Transvaal for a time by the Boer Government for advocating the removal of religious disabilities. He returned to this country once while rabbi of the Johannesburg congregation, when he came here to marry.

In 1911 Dr. Hertz was called by the congregation of Orach Chaim Synagogue, this city, which had been without a rabbi since the death of the Rev. Joseph Mayer Asher. He accepted, and in September, 1911, took up his duties at the local synagogue, where he has been ever since. The congregation granted him leave of absence last March to go to England at the invitation of several leading Jewish laymen there, to preach for three months in synagogues of the United Kingdom as a candidate for the office of Chief Rabbi.

Dr. Hertz is well known as a scholar and writer. He is the author of "The Jew in South Africa," "The Ethical System of James Martineau," "The Place of the University in Modern Life," and other works.

NEEDS NO SLUMBER, SAYS HARVARD MAN

Professor Has Lived Twenty Years Without Sleeping, It's Asserted, Yet Is Healthy.

LCST INSTINCT RECOVERED

Educator Rests Scientifically in a Special Chair—Once Feared Insomnia Would Craze Him.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—Experiments conducted in the State Psychopathic Hospital, and confirmed by investigations in the psychological laboratory of Harvard University, have demonstrated in one instance, at least, that sleep is unnecessary.

To carry on the experiments, a special chair was constructed that is scientifically perfect. It was devised to aid subjects to relax as completely as a gallon of molasses on a slab of cold marble. The scientists have been satisfied that sleep is unnecessary by the experience of a Harvard professor who has not slept in twenty years. When a victim of insomnia and threatened with insanity twenty years ago, the professor discovered by accident the "lost instinct," which Dr. Lydiard H. Horton of the State Hospital and other eminent psychologists are striving to bring back to mankind.

This "twilight state," as they call it, is a scientific rest far more satisfying than sleep. It restores the bodily vigor in half the time required by the common or mattress variety of sleep. The psychologists assert it also permits the brain to put in twenty-four hours' work a day. The facts of the Harvard professor's feat of retaining full consciousness for twenty years were given out to-day on condition that his identity be kept secret.

Dr. George Herbert Palmer, professor of philosophy, and Prof. Munsterburg, head of the department of psychology, are personal friends of the sleepless educator and have been interested in his case for years. He har for thirty years been a member of the Harvard Faculty and is distinguished as a writer and lecturer.

He lives in Cambridge, near the University. Although doctors feared insomnia was driving him insane before he learned to rest without sleeping or losing consciousness, he is in good health. There is nothing in his appearance to betray the fact that he never sleeps. He is famous, even in Harvard, for his unusually keen and agile mind.

The professor discovered two decades ago that hard mental work he was doing was making it more and more difficult for him to sleep. He worried greatly over his condition. Then he took up his problem in an impersonal way and studied it. He found that when he lay down and relaxed his body in a certain way he was able to rest without sleeping.

"Since then he has never slept for a single instant, nor has he tried to sleep. He has found it unnecessary," said a Harvard psychologist familiar with the case.

Prof. Münsterberg assured a reporter that his brother professor's independence of sleep was nothing more than any one could acquire with the proper training and will power.

"The experience of this man—I won't speak his name, for he is my friend, and he is a little sensitive—is nothing that cannot be explained by science," added Prof. Münsterberg.

Sons of William G. Study Wireless—To Have Home Plant When Qualified.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 16.—Godfrey and Stillman Rockefeller, the two young sons of William G. Rockefeller, have taken up the study of wireless telegraphy, and their father intends to erect for them an up-to-date wireless station at their home on Lake Avenue here as soon as they prove they are able to operate it. With this reward in sight the boys are deetrmined to master the aerial science. They receive two lessons a week from John Barrett, who is an expert telegrapher, although he operates his station at night only for his own amusement, being a jeweler by day.

The Rockefeller boys and three of their chums take messages from all the stations along the coast, and send to those within a radius of fifty miles, which include Sound steamers. The boys intend to have wireless outfits on their father's yacht next Summer.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 16.—An armistice arranged between the forces of President Madero and Gen. Felix Diaz, beginning at 2 o'clock this morning, lasted only until 11 o'clock. Fighting was then resumed, and the artillery bombardment was kept up until sunset, when the Government commanders gave orders to cease firing.

Advantage was taken of this respite by the men at the head of the foreign colonies to provide for the people under their charge. A zone of safety in the vicinity of the American Embassy had been established, and in this were concentrated all the foreigners possible. A local Post Office, cable station, and messenger service were made part of this colony. The Postal Department has worked especially well, its automobile service being used to keep the diplomats and other leaders in touch with all their charges.

Both the Government and rebel forces also took advantage of the truce to put the streets in better condition. There was great activity in removing and burning the bodies of dead horses, which had been a menace to the health of the city.

The population, which had been cooped up during the firing all last week, had a breathing spell this morning. The streets of the city were thronged with people carrying white flags. As soon as the fighting began they again sought shelter.

The results of the armistice have been so excellent that an attempt is being made for its renewal to-morrow. Gen. Delgado, a competent officer, who has the confidence of President Madero, is conducting negotiations with the rebels.

A strict censorship is being enforced by the Government. In one respect, however, this stoppage of news is having excellent results, as sensational dispatches are being cut. The censors are commended by foreigners for their service in this respect.

MEXICO, Feb. 16.—Hostilities were resumed with renewed fierceness in the Mexican capital to-day after a truce which lasted only a few hours.

The armistice, signed at 2 o'clock Sunday morning by the representatives of both sides, bound them to suspend operations for twenty-four hours, but it was broken before noon. Soon the sound of heavy cannonading and the whirr of machine guns announced the return of the Federal troops to their posts in front of the arsenal. It appeared as though the words of Madero and Diaz might prove prophetic, and that this time the battle would be to a finish.

CABINET APPROVES MESSAGE TO MADERO

No Change in Our Policy of Non-Intervention, Says Secretary Knox.

ANOTHER MIDNIGHT SESSION

Taft Summons Official Advisers on Receipt of Late Dispatches from Ambassador Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. — A special Cabinet meeting broke up at 12:45 this morning, after considering for over two hours this Government's reply to queries from President Madero as to the possible action of the United States to stop hostilities in the City of Mexico.

The Cabinet approved the draft of a message to the Mexican President and its terms will probably be made public to-day. No statement was given out that threw any light on the terms of that reply, but it is thought that it will be such as to commit the United States to no change of policy at this time.

When Secretary of State Knox left the Cabinet meeting he said positively that this Government's policy of non-intervention in Mexican affairs would continue. No additional ships for the present will be sent to Mexican ports, and the American army will remain at the present posts.

Mr. Knox said that the Cabinet meeting had discussed in full this Government's reply to President Madero and he would himself send that reply at once. Some time to-day he will make public the text of President Madero's note and his reply to it.

Madero's Appeal to Taft.

President Madero's message to President Taft had to do with the report in circulation in the City of Mexico Saturday that the United States Government had decided on a policy of military intervention, and that official information to that effect had been given to the British Minister in the City of Mexico. President Madero was anxious to obtain first hand knowledge as to the truth of this report, and he asked President Taft to inform him whether this Government had decided to intervene or was considering a policy of intervention.

President Madero referred to the news of the sending of American warships to Mexican ports, and asked Taft to order their commanders not to disembark troops in Mexico, as he feared that such a step would result in more terrible consequences than those with which Mexico was then contending. He insisted that the Mexican Government was able to guarantee safety to all classes.

There is a hopeful feeling in the Cabinet circle that the communication which is being sent to President Madero this morning will help clear the atmosphere and bring about a better condition of affairs in Mexico, as far as the interests of the United States and other foreign countries are concerned. As matters stand now, Americans and other foreigners are in real danger, and a continuance of the present condition of disorder may lead to excesses which will require the United States, and perhaps some of the European powers, to take a hand in the situation. It is with the desire and intention of doing everything possible to avoid such an outcome that the note to Madero was drafted.

Secretary Knox spent the entire evening at the White House in consultation with the President, taking with him the latest dispatches received from Ambassador Wilson.

No information was given out as to the nature or contents of these dispatches, but it was obvious that they continued to make it necessary for the President to maintain a close watch on the situation, and to have the attention and advice of his Cabinet on the latest phase of affairs.

It is known that the Cabinet is of one mind in support of the President's policy of non-intervention, and no differences of opinion have arisen in the consideration of the advices received from Ambassador Wilson or as to the course that this Government should follow.

While there were no positive statements in regard to the necessity for the meeting of the Cabinet last night, it was believed that the report from the City of Mexico that the armistice had been broken had caused a fear that the efforts to remove American and other foreign refugees to Vera Cruz and places of safety removed from the zone of fire would be impaired if not rendered entirely impracticable. This is an appearance of affairs that threatens the lives of the Americans in the City of Mexico directly, and that would of itself be sufficient to justify more vigorous steps than have yet been taken.

Wilson's Messages Delayed.

Following Saturday night's Cabinet conference at the White House, which, so far as the press was informed officially, resulted in a decision of the President and his advisers to adhere to the policy of non-intervention, the high officials of the Administration had a quiet Sunday. But disquieting information came to-night that an armistice had been broken and fighting in the streets of the capital had been resumed.

Most of the dispatches from the Ambassador have been delayed in transmission. It was not until this morning that the State Department received reports filed by the Ambassador between 6 and 11 o'clock last night. This evening, however, it received two more filed by Mr. Wilson this morning. This shows that the Mexican Government has not gone to the extreme of holding up diplomatic telegrams in cipher. One of these telegrams, filed at 10 A. M., did not indicate improvement in the situation, which, according to the State Department's paraphrase, "had been growing steadily worse." It mentioned that an armistice had been arranged.

In the other dispatch, filed at 11 o'clock, Mr. Wilson again referred to the armistice, and said that "there is great activity in the work of removing foreigners from the danger zone and arranging for the departure of a good many women and children for the United States." The language quoted is from a statement issued by the State Department, which does not pretend to give the exact phraseology of the message.

A press censorship has been established, and The Mexican Herald, published in English, has been suppressed and its doors sealed by order of the Government.

The Navy Department had not received any dispatches up to midnight from Rear Admiral Frank Fletcher, in command of the squadron sent to Vera Cruz. The Georgia of this special squadron reached Vera Cruz yesterday morning, and the Vermont, Admiral Fletcher's flagship, and the Nebraska were expected to arrive this afternoon. The orders were for the two battleships to anchor outside to-night. Admiral Fletcher will be in command of the entire force at Vera Cruz and have charge of the arrangements to take on board all Americans who desire to leave Mexico.

Ambassador Wilson's 11 o'clock dispatch said that arrangements were being forwarded to remove from the city all Americans who wished to be taken to the United States. It was his expectation that a special train would be chartered to carry several hundred women and children at the earliest possible time to Vera Cruz and place them on board the battleships. The Ambassador has ample funds and the warships are stocked with abundant food supplies.

The News in Washington.

The following statement, containing a summary of the official advices received by the State Department to-day, was made public to-night:

"It appears that yesterday the American Ambassador, in company with the German Minister, sought a conference with Gen. Huerta, but upon their arrival at the palace were asked to see President Madero. Gen. Huerta and Mr. Lascurain, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, were present. The American Ambassador requested:

> First, That the Federal forces should be so disposed as not to cause any firing over the foreign residential section in attacking the citadel.
>
> Second, That the neighborhood of the Embassy should be treated not only as an embassy but also as a place of refuge, a zone being established to cover that neighborhood, which would thus enjoy a special character of immunity due to humanitarian establishments.
>
> Third, That an American committee for the purpose of establishing centres of food distribution to the poor should be joined by the Government in its efforts.
>
> Fourth, That soldiers who have been placed on certain public buildings, notably one being used as a place of refuge, and upon certain American buildings, should be taken away.
>
> Fifth, That in order to make it possible for the American Rescue Committee to remove from dangerous places Americans lacking a supply of food and take them to safer places, there should be a three-hour armistice, and
>
> Sixth, That there should be an armistice of twelve hours to enable foreigners to leave the city by rail.

"It appears from the Ambassador's report that President Madero and Gen. Huerta finally acceded to all these requests. The Ambassador adds that the understandings above referred to have been publicly posted and that the American colony is much gratified at these results.

Diplomats in Unison.

"The American Ambassador had a conference in the very early hours of Feb. 15, Saturday, with his British, German, Spanish, and French colleagues at the American Embassy to consider the situation. The meeting was brought about with great difficulty, the automobile sent for Mr. Strong, the British Minister, having been struck by Federal bullets, although occupied by a Federal Colonel and six soldiers as a guard. As a result of this discussion the Spanish Minister proposed to visit the Palace to speak unofficially to President Madero on behalf of the four Ministers and the American Ambassador.

The meeting at the American Embassy broke up at 3 o'clock, the British Minister erated his refusal to comply with the suggestion of the Senators that he resign. He declared that he was still able to dominate, and that, given time, he would crush the rebel forces.

Rebels Felt More Confident.

Gen. Diaz had not show nhimself to be greatly in favor of the armistice, but consented to it out of respect for the efforts of the American Ambassador and the Ministers of the powers to bring about a cessation of hostilities until the foreigners and other non-combatants still within the zone of the fighting could be removed to a position of comparative safety. He regarded the truce as merely a delay in the accomplishment of his fixed purpose to drive Madero out of the Presidency.

The fighting Saturday had undoubtedly gone in favor of the rebels, who had resisted all assaults against them, had received into their ranks several hundred Federal deserters and had obliged the Federal commanders to admit that for the present, at least, their position was impregnable.

Gen. Huerta, commander of the Government troops, a hard fighter who has been through many campaigns, also was opposed to the armistice, and chafed under the terms which it imposed upon him. Nor did he willingly agree to an order sending a large body of his forces back to the Federal base near the National Palace last night.

President Madero's attitude was one of exasperation, but as he had requested the American Government to withhold intervention, he could do no more than consent to an armistice, when the question was submitted directly to him. He let it be known, without equivocation, however, that he was determined to retain the Presidency.

Diplomats Make Demands.

The American Ambassador and the German Minister called on the President and on Gen. Huerta and asked that the military dispositions of the Government forces should be so arranged as to render unnecessary the firing over the resident quarter; that a free zone be fixed, and that the Government unite with the American committee in the establishment of centres for the distribution of food to the poor, this having already been agreed to by Gen. Diaz provisionally.

Early this morning the Embassy was the scene of intense activity. A dozen automobiles moved swiftly to and fro, carrying refugees, provisions, and messages. The work entailed necessitated the hiring of a corps of extra clerks and stenographers. The Embassy building was besieged by hundreds, not all of them Americans, who asked for advice or assistance.

There is little actual suffering from lack of food or shelter within the city, but there is a vast amount of discomfort and great danger to those who remain.

Tells of Fighting at Night.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 16.—For a few minutes this afternoon there was communication with Mexico City by way of the National Railway's wires below Juarez. Only news that a twenty-four hours' armistice was in effect came over the wires before they were cut again by rebels below Juarez.

Communication was established again to-night at 9:15. The operator at Mexico City stated that Madero has reiterated his declaration that he had no intention of resigning, and that fighting was in progress at that moment. After the receipt of two messages communication was again cut off.

CENSORS CUT OFF NEWS.

Also Refuse to Permit Dispatches to Go to Mexico City.

The strictest censorship on all dispatches has been established at Mexico City. Government officials took charge of the cable office shortly after 5 o'clock Saturday evening and ruthlessly discarded the messages of correspondents to their papers. Code messages and all messages containing any expressions whatever that might be construed into a suggestion of the important happenings in the capital came under the ban.

Nevertheless, several dispatches of a somewhat detached nature escaped the vigilance of the censorship yesterday, and an early bulletin was flashed through that the armistice, signed at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, had been broken and that both sides were fighting savagely.

The Government was unable to shut off the official dispatches of the diplomatic representatives, but as these are sent in cipher considerable delay is being experienced because of the time occupied in translation.

The Government has not only shut the world off from Mexico City, but so far as the public is concerned has shut Mexico City off from the world. News dispatches sent Saturday night from the United States to Mexico City were either refused or held up, the intention evidently being that the residents within the capital shall not be informed of the measures which have been undertaken by the American and other Governments to protect their interests.

BARRETT IS SORRY NOW.

Regrets He Didn't Consult Taft and Knox Before Proposing Mediation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Realizing distinctly the proprieties in regard to diplomatic intercourse, John Barrett, Director of the Pan-American Union, in a statement given out to-night says he regrets that without intention to do harm he failed to submit to President Taft or Secretary Knox the proposal he advanced two days ago to have an international commission adjust the dissensions in Mexico. He pleaded that he erred more in method than in motive, and makes a handsome apology to both the President and the Secretary of State, asking that the great purposes for which the Pan-American Union was organized and developed be not prejudiced by what he tried to do in his eagerness to help Mexico out of her difficulties.

"I was so anxious," said Mr. Barrett, "to help head off what seemed an impending disaster to Pan-American accord in Mexico that I made public my plan without the slightest thought that it would displease the State Department or embarrass the American colony in Mexico.

"My record as United States Minister in three Latin-American countries and as executive officer of the Pan-American Union should convince the most skeptical that I erred in method rather than in motive. The numerous commendatory messages which I have received from all parts of this country, and some from Latin-America and Europe, show the widespread interest in my suggestion.

"Without the slightest intimation, direct or indirect, from the President or the Secretary of State that they were displeased, as reported in the newspapers, with my suggestion, I have of my own free will, and cheerfully, expressed to them my regret that I had unintentionally violated the conventions of diplomacy in not previously submitting to them my plan before it was made public."

OROZCO HOLDS BORDER TOWN.

Railroad Bridges Blown Up to Stop Federal Troops.

LAREDO, Feb. 16.—Col. Pascual Orozco's rebel band, which took possession of the town of Nuevo Laredo yesterday without resistance, rested on its orms to-day, awaiting the coming of the loyal troops, reported en route from Monterey to dislodge them. Late to-night the Federals had not appeared. No disorder was reported in Nuevo Laredo to-day.

United States troops are on guard at the International Railroad, ond foot bridges here, and a patrol has been established along the Rio Grande. State militiamen are guarding the Laredo Armory.

Three bridges on the Mexican National line, about sixty miles south of the border, were dynamited by the rebels last night to retard the movement of Federal troops, the rebels seizing the engine attached to a passenger train to convey the dynamite squad. The engine was restored to the train after the dynamiting operations were concluded, and the train allowed to proceed to Nuevo Laredo, where it was met by a switch engine and hauled across the border this morning.

None of the passengers, many of whom were refugees, and included about twenty American women and children, were molested. Mrs. Philip E. Holland, wife of the United States Consul at Saltillo, was among the passengers. Three women who boarded the train at Hidalgo, Chihuahua, said they were forced to leave because of the activity of bandits.

A strict embargo has been placed on freight of all kinds destined for Mexico via the Laredo gateway.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 16.—Hundreds of Americans from the Casas Grandes district are attempting to reach the border, fearing anti-American uprisings. No trains will be sent south, but the foreigners are expecting to charter a train at Chihuahua City to move north as far as possible, even though the wires are not operating.

TOOK HINT AND LEFT MEXICO JUST IN TIME

American Mining Operator Was Informed Two Days Before That Trouble Was Coming.

MADERO OBEYED SPIRITS

One Cause of the Hostility to Him—Mexican People Hate Americans, Says Mr. Largey.

M. S. Largey, a banker and mining operator of Butte, Mont., arrived in New York Saturday on the Ward liner Monterey from Vera Cruz. Mr. Largey left Mexico City two days before the battle between the Maderistas and the rebels began. Mr. Largey is at the Vanderbilt Hotel, where yesterday afternoon he told of the chaos he found in Mexico.

"The revolt," he said, "was very quietly managed, and very few Americans had reason to believe that it was due. But that it was coming was certain. For a few days before the trouble started we all knew that something was brewing. Madero's popularity among all classes had gone aglimmering, so to speak, and it was only a question of time before the lightning would strike.

"Mrs. Largey and I owe our good luck in getting out to nothing more nor less than a 'tip' given to me by a friend who had advance information that something was about to happen. On the Wednesday before the battle started this friend came to me and told me quietly that I had better take Mrs. Largey and get back to the United States as fast as I could. He told me to take no chances, and be sure and get the Thursday boat from Vera Cruz which, as it turned out, was the last boat to sail for the United States before the battle began.

"I had been in the city several weeks, having gone into Mexico via the San Antonio-Nuevo Laredo route. We had been there but a few days when we began to hear ugly rumors of rebels and bandits on the outskirts of the city, and of the impending fall of President Madero. I was in the city when they brought Felix Diaz up from Vera Cruz. They took him off the train twenty-five miles outside of the city and secretly rushed him to his prison in an automobile. Even then, you see, they were afraid to take Diaz through the city.

"Let me give you an instance of the audacity of the rebel bands. I had been in Mexico City only a few days when word came that a few hundred outlaws were on the outskirts of the city. The leader notified the President of the Street Railway and Electric Light Company that he and his men needed $5,000, and that unless it was forthcoming by that night he would cut off the electric supply of the city. The demand was refused, and that night at 11 o'clock the whole city was in darkness and no street cars were running. Four hours later the lights were on again. Whether the outlaws got their money I don't know.

"Everybody, Americans, Europeans, and Mexicans of all classes and degrees seemed to hate the President. I did not hear one kind thing said about him. They looked upon him as a dreamer and visionary, and a man without sand, if you want to express it that way. Then there was a general impression that he was under the domination of his wife, who is in an amateurish way a spiritualistic medium. Madero, you know, is a spiritualist, and the story they told in Mexico City was that at convenient times his wife went into trances, and when she came out told him what the spirits advised him to do regarding this or that important matter of State. Madero was said to follow her instructions to the letter.

"On all sides I heard it said that Madero would never serve out the term for which he had been elected. I even heard it said that before he would be permitted to retain his office he would be killed, if it should turn out that was the only way to get rid of him."

Concerning the attitude of the Mexican people toward foreigners, and Americans in particular, Mr. Largey said the number of Mexicans he met who entertained a kindly feeling for this country was insignificant.

"Among the wealthy classes, a class that in number is not large, the United States may have some friends," he explained, "but the great masses of the population hate Americans with an intensity that is awful to contemplate. As a matter of fact, the masses hate all foreigners, and the only reason that they tolerate them is because they are the people who bring money into the country. Mexico has hundreds of thousands of acres of land waiting to be reclaimed by irrigation, and it takes money to irrigate. For that reasan, some of the wealthy land owners, realizing that only foreign money can make those lands profitable, are not against Americans and other foreigners coming into their country, for they know they are the only people who can make their irrigation dream a reality."

Speaking of business conditions, Mr. Largey said:

"The situation could not be worse. Business is absolutely dead in the City of Mexico. The hotels are starving for trade and the shops don't know what a big day is any more. For instance, I met a young American named Doty, who owns about a dozen automobiles that he purchased, hoping to build up a tourist trade. He told me that for eighteen months his business had been practically at a standstill. The only people who go to Mexico City now, he said, are those who have to go because of business interests. His tourist trade practically died more than a year ago."

Mr. Largey said that Mexico's financial affairs were in such bad shape that all work on the new $50,000,000 Capitol, at the foot of Juarez Street, had stopped. The steel skeleton of the structure is complete, and, in order to keep it from rusting before building operations are resumed, a $10,000 contract has been signed to have it painted.

Of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, Mr. Largey said he was admittedly the ablest diplomat in Mexico City, and also one of the most popular Americans who has ever lived in that city.

TREVINO REMAINS LOYAL.

Choice of Rebels for President Still Supports the Government.

MONTEREY, Mexico, Feb. 16.—Gen. Geronimo Trevino, commander of the Federal troops in the northern military zone, said to-day:

"I have not authorized my name to be used in connection with any rebellion against the constituted Government and against the interest of my country, which I feel it my duty to patriotically and loyally defend. This is my irrevocable resolution."

Gen. Trevino had been mentioned as a possible candidate for the Presidency should Felix Diaz be successful in Mexico City. In a statement last night Pascual Orozco, Sr., who took possession of the town of Nuevo Laredo, said that Trevino was the choice of the revolutionary leaders of the State of Chihuahua and would be acceptable to Diaz.

180-POUND KEY STOLEN.

Locksmith Couldn't Replace One Used to Lift Mott Haven Bridge.

Early yesterday morning some one walked off with the key to the machinery operating the little lift bridge spanning the Mott Haven Canal at 135th Street, the Bronx, and tied up the traffic of the canal. A watchman reported the loss of the key to the Alexander Avenue Police Station.

"Well, why not get another key or break the lock?" advised Lieut. Hickey, who received the watchman's complaint over the telephone.

"It isn't that kind of a key," said the watchman.

Hickey sent Detective Whitman down to the canal to lift the blockade, and on the way he stopped in at a locksmith's and told him to bring along a bunch of keys, as he had a quick job for him. When Whitman asked to see the lock from which the key had been lost he was shown a large iron turnstile, and informed that the missing "key" weighed 180 pounds and required the muscle of two men to operate it as a lever in the machinery.

It is supposed that the "key" was stolen and sold for old iron.

20 HURT IN A CHURCH.

Gas Explosion Interrupts the Service and Wrecks Interior of Edifice.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 16.—Twenty members of the congregation of the First Methodist Church, South, at Oak Grove, twenty-five miles east of here, were injured to-night when a gas tank blew up in the basement. The Rev. J. Jester, a retired minister, will probably die. Half a dozen others are in a serious condition.

Soon after the service began the odor of gas was noticed in the church. Mr. Jester, with a lantern, went to the basement to find the leak. The explosion demolished the interior of the church.

WHITMAN NOW AFTER SWEENEY'S SUPERIOR

Has New Evidence Implicating Men Who Are Likely to Make Confession.

MAY INDICT TWO TO-DAY

Saloon Keeper Tells of Frame-Up That Extorted Blackmail When He Refused to 'Buy Protection.'

District Attorney Whitman obtained new documentary evidence yesterday of graft collected directly for Inspector Sweeney from disorderly resorts and saloons. It will be placed before the Grand Jury this morning as the basis for indicting two policemen of Inspector Sweeney's staff who collected directly for him instead of relaying it to the Inspector through a Police Captain. It shows the previous estimate of graft collections of $7,000 a month in Sweeney's district to have been ridiculously low.

This new evidence, District Attorney Whitman said last night, was the most valuable and conclusive yet obtained. It practically insures further confessions, which should bring out the name of the man next above Sweeney in rank in the "System."

The two indictments already voted against Inspector Sweeney will be handed in by the Grand Jury to-day. Immediately afterward the case against his two collectors will be taken up. The new evidence shows that the collectors for Inspector Sweeney did not stop at levying blackmail on places which violated the law. They made no exception in favor of saloons which observed the excise law. If the proprietors of such saloons failed to pay their "assessment," they found themselves in constant danger of a "frame-up."

Mr. Whitman heard the story of one saloonkeeper yesterday who refused to submit to extortion while he was complying with the law in every respect. He was arrested on a charge of running his saloon after closing hours and found that, if he went to trial, he would face overwhelming testimony to his guilt from half a dozen policemen and as many civilians. There was only one way out for him, the saloonkeeper said, and that was to pay $250, when the grafters saw to it that the "framed up" case broke down in court.

Inspector Sweeney went to Jersey City yesterday, but his movements were watched by detectives from the District Attorney's office, who have been kept constantly on his trail since the confession of Capt. Walsh. It was learned yesterday that District Attorney Whitman had taken the utmost precautions against the disappearance of more witnesses or of police officials whom he expects to bring to justice. During the past week he has had detectives watching outgoing ships to block this avenue of escape.

One of the Inspector's collectors who may be indicted to-day is only a patrolman in rank, but the District Attorney has evidence to show that in the distribution of the spoils he had a share almost as large as that of Sweeney himself. In addition to his commission from what he collected for Sweeney this policeman had several smaller mines of graft which he worked on his own account. The Inspector found this man indispensable as an agent, and rewarded him by allowing him to hunt the smaller game for himself.

If the hearing of evidence in these cases does not take up the entire session of the Grand Jury to-day, Policeman Hartigan may be placed on the stand again. Mr. Whitman wishes to allow this policeman another chance to testify regarding the efforts of Inspector Sweeney to bribe George A. Sipp and Policeman Fox to escape. After Hartigan's testimony, Mr. Whitman contemplates asking the Grand Jury to consider charges of perjury against certain witnesses who have appeared before that body in connection with the indictment of Inspector Sweeney.

For the reason that the graft investigations will keep the Grand Jury occupied for several days at least, consideration of the case of Commissioner W. J. Wright will be postponed. Because no action followed its presentment recommending the removal of Commissioner Wright on the ground that he had shown favoritism toward ex-City Chamberlain Hyde in the Tombs, it was intended that the Grand Jury should reopen this case, with a view to discovering the reason why Wright was permitted to remain in office.

Jacob Rouss, the law partner of Louis J. Grant, paid a visit last night to District Attorney Whitman. Mr. Rouss was one of the attorneys for George A. Sipp at the time when Sipp went into hiding in New Jersey after his testimony before the Curran Aldermanic Committee. Mr. Rouss said that he had called on the District Attorney to offer him assistance in investigating police graft.

The Curran Aldermanic Committee will renew its inquiry into the administration of the Police Department to-day. Witnesses will be questioned for the purpose of ascertaining whether the efficiency of the Detective Bureau is not impaired by constantly shifting the plain-clothes men and preventing them from specializing in particular types of criminals.

CABINET APPROVES MESSAGE TO MADERO

remaining for the night at the Embassy, due to the difficulty of crossing the danger zone to reach the British Legation. Saturday morning the Spanish Minister accordingly repaired to the palace and had a discussion with President Madero. Immediately thereafter thirty Senators made an unsuccessful effort to have an audience with President Madero. It is reported that the Senate had voted that President Madero be asked to resign by a vote of twenty-seven to three of those present, constituting a majority but not a quorum. Upon emerging from the palace certain Senators are said to have harangued the populace, calling for support of the legislative power and hinting that this course was necessary to prevent intervention.

"Yesterday morning a battery of artillery was stationed in the same block with the embassy. The Ambassador requested Gen. Huerta to remove it, which was done, thus relieving the apprehension this had caused the American colony in the vicinity.

"It was reported that Federal troops were being disposed in a manner to involve firing over the foreign residential district in attacking the citadel and that the French school, which the American embassy had used as a refuge for women and children, was being used as a [illegible]tion for Federal troops, a battery being stationed there.

"The American Ambassador and the German Minister joined in requesting of Gen. Huerta a cessation of firing at 3:30, when they wished to discuss with him the question of a daily armistice and the question of a definite limitation of the firing zone.

"The Ambassador says that Americans have been removed to as safe places as can be found, with the exception of many who refuse to leave their homes, although in danger. The Ambassador in carrying out his instructions has done all in his power to induce Americans to keep clear of dangerous places. The Ambassador states that the work of the different relief committees proceeds well; that a temporary cable and Post Office, first aid to the injured station, rescue and housing work, and quarters for the volunteer guard, as well as a branch bank, are being provided for.

"Previous telegrams confirm information to the effect that Richard M. Meredith, manager of the National Cash Register Company, had been killed, but that his wife and child are safe and are to be taken to a place of greater safety. A man named Southerland was wounded at the same time and is doing well.

"The Consul at Hermosillo reports absolute quiet throughout the State of Sonora.

"The Consul at Frontera reports that all sections of the State of Tabasco are quiet."

Along the Border.

A second statement made by the department follows:

"According to a telegram dated to-day from the Consul at Juarez, it is learned that all is quiet around Chihuahua, the railway between there and Juarez being open. The garrison in Juarez is entirely quiet, there being no evidence of partisanship one way or the other. Pasquez Gomez is reported to have gone into Mexico somewhat west of Juarez, and to have again declared himself provisional President, but the report is not confirmed. The Consul adds that unauthorized statements by the border press are doing much harm by creating dangerous excitement.

"The Consul at Chihuahua in a telegram dated 1 P. M. yesterday indicates that the feeling there is held in check pending the outcome at Mexico City, although there is understood to be considerable feeling against the Government. Train service has been opened north, and telegraph service is expected in the afternoon. Train and telegraph service south is open.

"The Consul at Durango reports that railroad service between Torreon and Eagle Pass has been reopened, and also between Torreon and Laredo. The Consul at Manzanillo reports ill-feeling caused by unauthorized statements by local Federal officials as to action by the United States."

The Cabinet was still in session at midnight, and there was no indication when the conference would conclude. President Taft requested all available information regarding the late developments. Keen interest was expressed by members of the Cabinet in the report of a strict censorship at Mexico City.

Gen. Wood, upon leaving the War Department before the Cabinet meeting ended, declared that no additional orders to troops had been given. He said that it was not thought necessary to increase the patrol along the Texas frontier at Laredo and Brownsville, as requested by Gov. Colquitt of Texas.

CAMPANIA 36 HOURS LATE.

Held Back by Gale and Heavy Sea—Lord Leigh Aboard.

The Cunard liner Campania arrived last night, thirty-six hours late, from Liverpool via Queenstown. Capt. Miller said that he received a wireless message from the Captain of the Leyland liner Devonian Tuesday night asking him to look out for the disabled British freighter Crown Point, which was somewhere in the middle of the Atlantic without a rudder and helpless. The Campania did not sight the Crown Point. On Wednesday there was a northerly gale blowing, with heavy sea, and the Campania made only 265 miles in the twenty-four hours ending noon Thursday.

Among her passengers was Lord Leigh, the owner of Stoneleigh Abbey, near Kenilworth Castle, one of the most picturesque estates in England. He was accompanied by his sister, the Hon. Agnes Leigh, and is going to visit Washington and Savannah, and go thence to Miami, Kingston, Jamaica, and Panama. Lord Leigh said that he would return to England by way of the West Indies on one of the Royal Mail Steam Packet liners.

"I stopped my sore throat with this pleasant tasting tablet"

THOUSANDS are saying this every day. Sore throat is now realized by the medical profession as an ailment that if neglected is liable to develop into much more serious trouble—such as Tonsillitis, La Grippe, etc. A sore throat means a lowering of your natural bodily resistance to the millions of germs that you cannot avoid inhaling at every breath, that they have found a breeding spot in the delicate membranes of the mouth and throat cavities. And there they must be subdued.

Gargles and mouth washes have been proven ineffective because of the difficulty in using them and their inability to reach the germs, but thousands of physicians today have found that in treating sore throat they attain the best results with

THE GERM-KILLING THROAT TABLET

Enrico Caruso, The world's greatest tenor, writes: "I have found Formamint Tablets very pleasant to the taste and beneficial to the throat."

Dr. Wm. Lee Howard, The well-known medical author, writes: "I have no hesitation in stating that in Formamint we have a remedy that is invaluable in keeping the mouth and air passages free from germ infection." From an article in "The Lancet" March 28th, 1908. "The sole object of a medicinal lozenge is to keep part of the mouth or throat one desires to treat bathed for a time in a drug dissolved in the saliva. I know of only one medicated lozenge—FORMAMINT—which meets this requirement."

Sucked like candy, it melts in the mouth and releases its powerful yet harmless germicide which mixes with the saliva and is carried easily and naturally into the throat passages, reaching the germs, destroying them and quickly promoting the healing of the membranes.

Second Norwegian Expedition Fails to Reach the Germans Stranded in Spitzbergen.

EXPLORERS IN GREAT PERIL

Were Reported Short of Provisions Two Months Ago—Members of Noble Families in the Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 16.—A telegram from Spitzbergen says that the members of the German scientific expedition to that remote island is in serious danger. A Norwegian rescue party was forced to return to Dickson Bay, owing to the heavy snow and severe cold. It left a depot of food and clothing.

The Norwegians are willing to make another effort, but it is necessary that a fast steamer and dogs should be sent as quickly as possible from Norway; otherwise the German expedition will be lost.

CHRISTIANIA, Feb. 16.—The second Norwegian expedition sent to the relief of the German scientists, stranded in a remote part of Spitzbergen, has failed in its undertaking.

The would-be rescuers left Advent Bay late in January, but were forced to return to Green Harbor in a pitiful condition.

When the expedition reached Dickson Bay a hurricane stopped all progress. Seven dogs died and several members of the rescuing party were frostbitten. Two sledges were destroyed, and for that reason and the loss of the dogs the expedition was forced to leave behind all provisions except minimum rations.

No further effort will be possible until additional dogs are sent from Norway. Persons familiar with Spitzbergen think that unless the Germans are reached soon their position will be very precarious.

A German expedition organized by the Duke of Altenburg at an expense of $20,000 started last August in the two-masted ship Herzog Earst, under Capt. Ritschel, to find a passage around the northeastern end of Spitzbergen Island.

That same month the Herzog Earst was sighted by the Victoria Luise of the Hamburg-American line in Cross Bay, one of the northern inlets of Spitzbergen, and two tourists, E. M. Newman and A. K. Kuhn, inspected her and talked with her Captain. On their return to this country in January they gave interviews to THE NEW YORK TIMES concerning the expedition.

According to them the expedition was a failure because proper precautions had not been taken, and the equipment was inadequate.

The Victoria Luise not only had to supply the company of explorers with fresh water, but also with such supplies as food and clothing. The tourists said that all the sledge dogs were chained to the deck without any protection from the waves, which dashed over them during storms. Three of these dogs, upon being loosened, committed suicide by springing overboard.

The next news of the expedition to come from Spitzbergen was a Marconigram, dated Jan. 6, from the Norwegian wireless station there, saying that Capt. Ritschel had reached Advent Bay in an exhausted condition, and reported the failure of his party. He said they were at Mijde Bay, on the northeastern coast. They had but one month's provisions left, and unless relieved soon would perish.

When the Captain reached the post, he was in such condition that his clothes had to be cut off and all his toes amputated.

An expedition was formed at once to go to the relief of the stranded explorers, but this was driven back by a northern hurricane.

It was Dec. 17 when Capt. Ritschel left his party, and since then no aid has reached them. Among the company are said to be members of noble families of Germany, and much consternation has been caused in that country by the news of their danger.

The expedition was intended as a scouting party for a second expedition, to be sent out this coming June under the command of Lieut. Stranzin, but it is likely that this party will not start, now that the other expedition has proved a failure.

AIR POSTMAN FLIES AGAIN.

Jones Makes Another Jump on His Way Here with Parcels.

NEW LONDON, Feb. 16.—Harry M. Jones, aviator, who is flying from Providence to New York, made a flight to-day from Mystic, where he alighted last night, to the Niantic camp grounds, near here, but decided not to go to New York to-day, as he had intended.

He probably will continue his flight to-morrow.

EVANS DENIES HIDDEN SECRET ABOUT SCOTT

Written Narrative of the Last Struggle Far Short of Facts, It Is Said.

SCOTT'S THOUGHT OF OTHERS

Saw That His Comrades Were in Sleeping Bags Before He Passed Away—Funds Grow Slowly.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Monday, Feb. 17.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Christchurch, N. Z., says:

"All the surviving members of Capt. Scott's expedition bitterly resent the suggestion that the dog driver, Demetri, and Cherry Garrard, who made the first relief journey toward the south, could have done any more than they did to save Scott and his comrades.

"All express the highest admiration for the work of Dr. Atkinson, who knowingly took enormous risks.

"Commander Evans asserts that absolutely nothing regarding the expedition has been held back.

"Mr. Drake, Secretary of the expedition, is hurriedly returning to England Thursday via the Suez Canal.

"It is understood that Capt. Scott completely closed Bowers and Wilson in their sleeping bags before he himself died.

"I am assured officially that the narrative of Scott's party falls far short of the actual details of privation and bravery.

"Lieut. Campbell's party suffered from want of tobacco. They smoked tea and the fittings of their sledge.

"Capt. Amundsen's vessel, the Fram, is leaving for the United States in a few days to meet Amundsen."

Despite the urgent appeals of the newspapers, subscriptions to the Scott funds come in very slowly. The Mansion House fund has reached only $11,300, and the Lord Mayor has issued another appeal, pointing out the necessity for a larger response.

The Daily Telegraph, which is raising a fund in behalf of the dependents of the dead explorers, has received the following cablegram from Col. Roosevelt:

"I am more than glad to join with Peary and others on this side of the Atlantic in most cordial indorsement of your plan for a national fund to supplement the pensions to the widows and dependents of those who lost lives in Scott's most gallant party."

The American Geographical Society likewise cables:

"The American Geographical Society of New York wishes every success to your praiseworthy and patriotic endeavor to carry out the dying wish of the gallant and lamented Scott."

Markham's Tribute to Scott.

Sir Clements Markham, writing to The Times from Lisbon, pays glowing tribute to Capt. Scott. He says of him:

"He ranks highest among our polar worthies. He proved the possession of all the great qualities needed to secure success. He was the founder and first organizer of antarctic traveling.

"Wise and prudent, yet indomitable and absolutely fearless, Scott was adored by those who served under him. He was a most accomplished officer, only influenced by the highest motives, ever thoughtful for the comfort and welfare of his people, working for their interests, never for his own.

"His noble and chivalrous nature scorned all selfish motives. One of his last acts was to forego all benefits that might accrue to himself from lectures or any other sources for the good of the expedition. The name of Robert Scott will be ever honored among the best and greatest of our explorers."

Major Gen. Greely, U. S. A., who commanded the international polar expedition to Lady Franklin Bay in 1881, has addressed a letter from Rome to Lord Curzon, the President of the Royal Geographical Society, in which he says:

"In the name of the survivors of my own command, permit me to pay homage to your antarctic dead. Their sense of duty, their persistence of action, their accomplishment of purpose, their acceptance of disaster, their solidarity of spirit, and their fearlessness of death reflect credit not only on their country but also on mankind at large."

SEAMEN IN MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Men from British Ships Pay Tribute to Scott and His Comrades.

In honor of Capt. Robert Falcon Scott and his four companions, who perished in the antarctic snows, a memorial service was held last evening in the auditorium of the American Seamen's Institute at 507 West Street. The same hymns, "Rock of Ages," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," which were sung on Friday at the service in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, were sung last evening. But here was was no great and resplendent gathering of officialdom such as joined there in the familiar hymns. The singers were just a company of British seamen, like Edgar Evans, and stokers and oilers from the Baltic and Adriatic.

After the men had filed into the auditorium, about 8 o'clock, when the café downstairs had become deserted and the click of the billiard balls in the big room beyond had gradually subsided, Dr. George McPherson Hunter of the Institute told again the story of the men who fought their way to the south pole, found that another party from another country had been before them, and then on the long journey back to civilization died of starvation and exposure only eleven miles from safety.

MAWSON EXPEDITION SAFE.

Australian Antarctic Explorer Sends Wireless of Start for Home.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The Daily Mail's Sydney correspondent says that a wireless dispatch from Adelie Land, via MacQuarie Island, announced that the Aurora, the ship of the Mawson antarctic expedition, has left there with Dr. Douglas Mawson and all hands for Mr. Wild's base at Termination Glacier. All the members of the party are well.

Frank Wild, who was with the Shackleton expedition, is in charge of the landing party of seven men who are working on the glacier, which is supposed to be the largest in the world.

The Australian expedition under Dr. Mawson set out in the latter part of 1911. It comprises fifty men, consisting in large part of graduates of the universities of Australia and New Zealand. It was financed by popular subscription.

Dr. Mawson planned to proceed south from Australia and land three separate shore parties. His special design was to complete a geographical and magnetic survey between Cape Adare and Gaussburg, a distance of over 2,000 miles.

The expedition had not been heard of for three months.

HE INVENTED COLD STORAGE.

Rescued from Want, Charles Tellier, at 85, Receives Honors in Paris.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—At the age of 85, and living until lately a life of penury, Charles Tellier, inventor of the system of cold storage, was decorated on Saturday night with the cross of the Legion of Honor and was entertained at a dinner by the International Cold Storage Association.

A few months ago he was found living almost in want, and a subscription was raised, which produced $16,000. His career, like that of many inventors before him, shows that he sacrificed everything for science.

Thirty years ago he found a method of freezing food by means of two new chemicals, methylic ether and trimethylamine. He developed his theories, built laboratories, perfected the process, and in 1876 constructed the ship La Frigorifique, which took a cargo of frozen meat from Rouen to La Plata, the first consignment of what has since become a product of worldwide trade.

The menu of the dinner was composed exclusively of products from distant countries, the transport of which was made possible by the method of which the guest of the day was the pioneer.

Missing Incumbent of Yorkshire Parish Sends Wireless Defense.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The Rev. Albert Knight, the missing Yorkshire vicar, whose elopement was described in these dispatches, has sent a long wireless message to The Daily Mail from aboard the steamer Port Lincoln, via Luderitz Bay, in German Southwest Africa.

After formally relinquishing orders as a priest of the Church of England, Knight, in a feeble defense, attributes his downfall to slanderous gossip which said evil things of him when he was working to rescue girls from the white slave traffic. He thought that by flying to a new country he might establish for himself and the woman who accompanied him a new reputation. He says he is entirely responsible for the concoction of the scheme for his disappearance; his wife is entirely blameless for the statements she has made.

FEAR POWERS PUSH CHINA TOWARD RUIN

Franco-Russian Intrigues to Prevent Success of Loan Helped by British Foreign Office.

FINANCE MINISTER DESPAIRS

Threatens to Resign, Which Would Wreck the Cabinet and Perhaps Cause Republic's Downfall.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Feb. 17.—The Daily Telegraph's Peking correspondent in a long dispatch on the loan situation asserts that serious consequences will follow soon unless the British Government reconsiders its determination to force China to the last extremity. He says:

"The sextuple group, having failed to keep any of their promises, are to-day more hopelessly at sea than ever regarding the arrangement of their differences and carrying out of their engagements.

"A week ago the Minister of Finance, Tchow-Hsuch-Hsi, realizing that the postponement was indefinite, made arrangements with the sextuple group, with the approval of the British Minister, to the effect that China might contract an independent £10,000,000 ($50,000,000) loan, to be issued immediately, if security could be found other than the salt revenues.

"The Finance Minister, therefore, offered the land transfer tax and stamp tax, amounting together to £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) annually.

"These negotiations were proceeding smoothly and successfully in London until last Thursday, when the Foreign Office suddenly raised new objections, positively refusing to sanction any issue until after the six-power loan was floated.

"The British financiers, though prepared to issue the loan and finance the Chinese Government generally, will not act without the sanction of the Foreign Office, and on Friday they telegraphed to this effect.

"Faced by this new collapse, the Finance Minister, finding his position intolerable and being unable to turn in any direction for help, purposes to resign immediately, and depart from Peking, which would bring about the fall of the entire Cabinet."

With reference to France's objection to the three Chinese nominees as auditors under the sextuple agreement, the correspondent says:

"I am in a position to assert that the French protest, though technically directed against all three alike, would certainly be made on some other score, no matter what names were substituted, as absolute instructions have been conveyed to the Russian and French Legations not to permit any financial help to China until the autonomy of Mongolia is fully recognized.

"The attitude of the British Foreign Office is undoubtedly due to French and Russian representations, and China is menaced with ruin for base political reasons."

The Russian pressure is steadily growing, says the correspondent, but the Chinese Army and the political parties are determined to stand firm on the question of Mongolia, holding that Peking would be untenable if Mongolia was lost. He continues:

"The French proposal to substitute French and Russian auditors is regarded as a deliberate and carefully calculated insult, for even if the Peking Government accepted it, the provinces would revolt, throw off Peking's authority, and assemble the Parliament at Nanking.

"The final circumstance lies in the fact that if the large amounts of Chinese Treasury bills in the hands of foreign bankers and maturing next month are not redeemed, or renewed, China can be proclaimed officially bankrupt and armed intervention must come.

"Many observers already believe that if the present conditions continue for a few days longer, the whole provisional Government, including President Yuan Shi Kai, must drive to the legation quarter and declare that the work of the Government has become impossible."

After stating that from an instrument destined to accomplish Chinese regeneration the sextuple loan had been changed to a weapon to effect China's ruin, the correspondent condemns England's indorsement of this reactionary policy, adding:

"If in the face of all these circumstances the British Foreign Office disregards the warnings and persists in ignoring the realities of the situation, it is said here that the culpability for any tragedy in China will rest on its shoulders. I repeat that unless an adequate British loan is arranged promptly the Chinese situation will break the two."

PEKING, Feb. 16.—Present returns from the general elections held throughout China indicate that President Yuan Shi Kai will be returned to office by a substantial majority.

ELIOT DIDN'T BLAME TAFT.

Admits Calling Fourth-Class Postmasters Patronage Men.

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—Dr. Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University, was quoted in Boston dispatches recently as criticising President Taft for having placed the fourth-class Postmasters under civil service rules. Dr. Eliot said to-day he had been misquoted, and explained that although he had said the fourth-class Postmasters were patronage appointees, he had not singled out Mr. Taft for censure.

"I did not criticise President Taft," he added. "I did not mention his name. I did say, as quoted, 'The fourth-class Postmasters are patronage appointees,' but this is not new to the present Administration. They have been patronage appointees in earlier Administrations. I made no personal criticism of the President."

HUES OF RAINBOW IN SPRING GOWNS

Opening Fashion Display at Auteuil Indicates a Season of Flaring Colors.

ELABORATE SKIRT A FEATURE

Fully Draped, It Preserves Hobble Characteristics—Small Hats Are Simply Trimmed.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—Auteuil presented a most brilliant appearance to-day on the occasion of the opening of the Paris racing season. Mannequins were conspicuous by their absence, as the fashionable dressmakers have apparently agreed not to send any to the course for the present, in pursuance of their new policy of preserving strict secrecy until late in the season; but the public in general nevertheless afforded an opportunity of viewing what will be worn by smart women this Spring.

Never before in such an assembly had colors so startling been seen, nor such bewildering contrasts—two, three, and even four different shades being worn at the same time. These flaring colors appear absolutely to have superseded the sober blue serge so popular during the past few years. Not a single costume of the latter color was seen to-day.

Another feature which will undoubtedly be the principal characteristic of the Spring fashions is the exceedingly elaborate skirt, made both in cloth and silk, fully draped from the back and narrowing to almost hobble skirt dimensions in the hem. An ingenious and picturesque arrangement of the drapery of the skirt, which is cut up in front, almost to the knee, in the shape of a reversed "V," assures perfect freedom of movement to the wearer.

Low shoes, mostly bronze in color, but in some case matching the dress, and almost invariably with red morocco heels, are worn with the new skirts.

As to coats, they are usually of the same color as the skirts, but always of brilliant hue. In shape they are generally short and cutaway. Some of the more popular shades seen to-day were grass green, du Barry red, and practically every other shade of red, sky blue, bottle green—the latter being generally seen in velvet—orange, buff, and brilliant mauve.

One of the most startling models was a coat of extraordinary colored cloth, cutaway in front, over a skirt of a large check of cinnamon taffeta. The skirt revealed very low velvet slippers and embroidered silk stockings. The costume was completed by a collar of brilliant yellow fox fur.

Another dress which attracted much attention was of bright orange velvet, trimmed with skunk fur, with muff to match.

Small hats, generally very simply trimmed with either tiny flowers of bright hues or a single quill or lancer plume, appear to be most favored.

The general impression gathered by observers of to-day's first fashionable meeting of the new season is that the Spring modes will be calculated to increase by a good deal the yearly expenditure of well-dressed women.

TURKISH CABINET READY TO GIVE UP

Grand Vizier Is Visiting Foreign Embassies and Discussing Terms of Surrender.

ARMY IN TERRIBLE STRAITS

Gallipoli Forces Are Huddled Together, Awaiting Another Blow from the Allies.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Monday, Feb. 17.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Constantinople says:

"The Grand Vizier, Mahmoud Shevket Pasha, has been converted by a clearer knowledge of his office to the belief of Kiamil Pasha's Cabinet, which he overthrew, that the greatest need of Turkey is to bring the war to an end. He is paying frequent visits to the foreign embassies. At one of them, I am told, he mooted the possibility of surrendering Adrianople and the Black Sea frontier past Media, but I cannot guarantee the accuracy of the statement."

A Daily Mail dispatch from Sofia says:

"The Turkish battleship Assaritewfik, which went ashore on the Black Sea coast, has been blown up by Bulgarian engineers.

"Another sortie of the Turks from Adrianople has been repulsed by the Bulgarians."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 16.—Leading Turkish women held a meeting and decided to sell their jewelry in behalf of the Ottoman Army. The wife of Hadji Adjil, Minister of the Interior, was among the first to send her jewels to the Ministry of Finance.

LONDON, Monday, Feb. 17.—Uncensored dispatches from Constantinople confirm the utter failure of Enver Bey, the Turkish Chief of Staff, to land troops on the coast of the Sea of Marmora. His forces, the dispatches say, are now huddled at Gallipoli, where they are unable to obtain supplies.

The Daily Chronicle's correspondent reports the landing of 40,000 Greeks at Besika Bay, on the coast of Asia Minor, near the entrance to the Dardanelles. This statement is regarded as doubtful.

The situation between Rumania and Bulgaria again has become serious. The negotiations at Sofia did not result in an agreement on the points at issue.

Hakki Pasha, former Grand Vizier, has arrived in London. There seems little reason to doubt that Turkey's military position is hopeless, and that when the expected decisive battle is fought for the possession of Kurndagh, in the Bulair district, a fresh attempt will be made to negotiate for peace.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 16.—The Russian Emperor's reply to the letter recently sent to him by the Austrian Emperor is short and decisive. He asserts that Austria's attitude in recent years has impelled Russia to support the interests of her Slav brothers.

At the same time the Russian Emperor expresses the belief that a means will be found to maintain peace.

RALPH HERZ WEDS AGAIN.

Mrs. Langtry Sees Lulu Glaser's Ex-Husband Marry Mrs. Harden.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 16.—Ralph Herz, former husband of Lulu Glaser, was married here at midnight to Mrs. Leah Harden of New York. The couple then left for Sacramento, where Mr. Herz has an engagement to play on the vaudeville circuit. The wedding ceremony was witnessed by Mrs. Langtry, who came over the bay from Oakland after her evening performance. A wedding supper at the St. Francis followed.

Mrs. Herz was formerly of Augusta, Ga. She went to New York, where she married James Harden, who divorced her. She left New York City in January with Mrs. Albert Frohlich on a trip through California, and met Mr. Herz here. Mrs. Langtry has been a friend of Mr. Herz since he began his theatrical career in London.

James Harden obtained a decree of absolute divorce from Leah Harden in the Supreme Court on Dec. 3, 1910. The proceedings, which lasted for three days, were characterized by the extremely sensational testimony given.

Harden charged that he had found his wife and Eugene H. Burr, the co-respondent, together the night of Aug. 4, 1910, when he raided Burr's apartment at Garnet Hall, Broadway and 141st Street, with his attorney, R. T. Brewster, and Steele Sturgis. Zachary T. Miller, a friend of Burr's, who occupied an apartment directly above him, testified that on this occasion Harden met him in the hall of the apartment house, confided to him his belief that Mrs. Harden was in Burr's apartment, and urged Miller to call up Burr on the telephone and find out if it was the case. Miller did, so he testified. At first Burr denied her presence there, but later he admitted that Mrs. Harden was in the apartment, and said that if Harden would go away he would take her out.

GENEROUS NEW YORK LEADS IN CITY COST

Spends More Than Any of Her Sisters in Outlay for Maintenance.

$25.11 YEARLY PER CAPITA

Revenue 26 Per Cent. of Total for 184 Municipalities—Health Expense Doubles Average.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—Illuminating figures on the cost of maintaining the larger cities of the United States have just been made public in a bulletin by the Federal Census Bureau, showing the sources of revenue and methods of disbursing municipal funds in 1910. Those figures show that the per capita cost of maintaining the municipality of New York is greater than that for any other city in the country. The per capita cost of maintenance for New York City is given as $25.11. There are eighteen cities of over 300,000 population. For those cities the per capita cost of operation is $20.12. For the 184 American cities which have over 30,000 population the per capita cost is $16.45. The per capita cost in Nw York City approximately is $5 greater than the cost when averaged for the eighteen cities of over 300,000, and almost $9 greater per capita than the average for the 184 American cities having 30,000 or more population.

The revenue received by the City of New York in 1910 was $197,779,833. This was 26 per cent. of the total municipal revenue collected in all 184 of the American cities having over 30,000 population. The sources of revenue for New York are given by the Federal Census as follows:

|---|---|
| Property, business, and poll tax | $141,679,985 |
| Licenses and permits | 7,163,721 |
| Special assessments | 12,459,288 |

The per capita cost of those advantages in New York City is given by the Census Bureau as $3.14 per capita for general government of the city, $3.44 for the police, $1.97 for fire protection, 60 cents per capita for health conservation, $2.01 for sanitation, $3.39 for highways, $2.09 for charities, $6.45 for schools, 36 cents per capita for libraries, art galleries, and museums; 72 cents for recreation, and 43 cents for miscellaneous objects.

Like most American cities, New York spends more for the support of schools than for any other single object of municipal endeavor. The percentage spent on schools and education is given as 25.7. The percentage distribution of the payments for other objects in New York City is given as follows: Legislative government, 0.2 per cent.; executive government, 4.8; judicial branch of the city government, 5.2; government land and buildings, 2.3; police, 13.7; fire protection, 7.8; other protection, 2.45; health conservation, 2.4; sanitation, 8; highways, 13.1; charities and corrections, 8.3; libraries, museums, and art galleries, 1.5; recreation, 2.09; miscellaneous, 1.7. Charities and corrections in New York cost more than health conservation, recreation, and libraries.

The per capita cost of municipal payments in New York, $25.11, as compared with the other large American cities, is given as follows: Chicago, $16.91; Philadelphia, $17.67; St. Louis, $17.45; Boston, $27; Cleveland, $15.35; Baltimore, $14.75; Pittsburgh, $20; Detroit, $14.82; Buffalo, $17.21; San Francisco, $21.39; Milwaukee, $15.83; Cincinnati, $20.33; Newark, $19.03; New Orleans, $12.42; Washington, $24.70; Los Angeles, $15.13, and Minneapolis, $15.68.

Government Costly Here.

New York spends more per capita for general Government than any other large American city, except San Francisco and Cincinnati. The per capita cost of general Government in San Francisco is $3.32, in Cincinnati it is $3.15, and in New York $3.14. The per capita cost of general Government in Chicago is $2.53; Philadelphia, $2.93; St. Louis, $2.09; Boston, $3.03; Washington, $2.06.

San Francisco is the only large city that pays more per capita for police protection than New York. The per capita in San Francisco for police is $3.55, compared with $3.44 in New York. The average per capita cost of police in the eighteen cities of over 300,000 population is $2.15, so that New York's police cost $1.29 more than the average. The per capita cost of police in other large American cities is $2.96 in Chicago, $2.94 in Philadelphia, $3.32 in Boston, $1.50 in Cleveland, $2.31 in Baltimore, $2.05 in Pittsburgh, $1.75 in Detroit, $2.36 in Buffalo, $1.58 in Milwaukee, $2.34 in Cincinnati, $2.36 in Newark, $1.23 in New Orleans, $3.37 in Washington, $1.51 in Los Angeles, and $1.24 in Minneapolis.

The average cost of the Fire Departments in these American cities is $1.65 per capita. New York's Fire Department costs $1.97, but is not the costliest in the country when reckoned on the per capita basis. San Francisco pays the most per capita for fire protection, $3.45; Boston pays $2.34, Buffalo $2.27, and Cincinnati $2.33.

The per capita cost of health conservation in New York City is double the average cost of this service in the largest eighteen American municipalities. The average is 33 cents. In New York the cost is 60 cents. Only Boston pays more for health conservation, 67 cents, compared with 22 for Chicago, 34 for Philadelphia, 26 in St. Louis, 28 in Cleveland, 29 in Baltimore, 47 in Pittsburgh, 25 in Detroit, 27 in Buffalo, 28 in San Francisco, 20 in Milwaukee, 21 in Cincinnati, 59 in Newark, 51 in New Orleans, 46 in Washington, 24 in Los Angeles, and 18 in Minneapolis.

Second in Education Outlay.

Boston leads the country in its per capita expenditure on schools and education, paying $6.59. New York ranks second. The average per capita cost of education for the eighteen larger cities is $4.62. In New York the per capita cost of schools is $6.45. Washington pays $6.27, and is the only other large American city that pays over $6 per capita for education. The per capita cost of schools in other large American cities is $4.36 in Chicago, $3.93 in Philadelphia, $4.23 in St. Louis, $4.70 in Cleveland, $3.34 in Baltimore, $5.16 in Pittsburgh, $3.78 in Detroit, $3.97 in Buffalo, $5.01 in Cincinnati, $5.79 in Newark, $2.89 in New Orleans, $5.35 in Minneapolis, $4.03 in San Francisco, $4.41 in Milwaukee, and $3.77 in Los Angeles.

The playground movement has developed rapidly in New York. Still, the showing for playgrounds in that city is not so good as that for education and other subjects of municipal endeavor. Six other American cities pay more per capita for recreation than does New York. New York pays 72 cents. Boston leads the country with $1.70. Chicago ranks second at $1.26. Other cities leading New York in payments for recreation are Pittsubrgh with 77 cents, Detroit with 76 cents, San Francisco with 96 cents, and Washington with 88 cents.

The average per capita expenditure for recreation in the 184 American cities having over 30,000 population is 59 cents. The average in the 18 cities with over 300,000 population is 78 cents. New York is slightly below this average. But New York spends more for recreation than does Philadelphia with 52 cents, St. Louis with 46, Cleveland 47, Baltimore 62, Buffalo 64, Milwaukee 45, Cincinnati 44, Newark 71, New Orleans 25, Los Angeles 59, and Minneapolis 70.

Washington leads the country in its expenditure on highways. The per capita cost there is $3.60. Boston ranks second with $3.37, and New York third with $3.29.

Boston Beats Us in Sanitation.

Boston is first in sanitation, with a per capita of $2.44, and New York ranks second with $2.01.

Pittsburgh leads in municipal expenditure per capita for the support of libraries, museums, and art galleries. The average per capita expenditure of American cities for those purposes is 27 cents. Pittsburgh's is 73 cents, or three times the average. Five American cities are paying more per capita along this line than New York. They are Boston, 57 cents; Cleveland, 51; Pittsburgh, 73; Buffalo, 38, and Minneapolis, 37. New York spends 36 cents per capita, the same as Cincinnati.

The increasing governmental costs of cities, and a corresponding increase in revenue receipts, is shown in the report by a comparative summary of the revenue receipts and governmental cost payments for 145 cities for the years 1902 to 1910.

In those years the revenue receipts increased from $419,819,091 to $717,882,232, and the payments for permanent public properties and improvements increased from $128,083,343 to $266,244,078. These increases were greater than the corresponding increase in the population, as is evidenced by the increase in the per capita revenue receipts from $20.12 to $27.24. The per capita payments for expenses and interest increased from $16.37 to $20.53, and the per capita payments for permanent properties and improvements increased from $6.13 to $10.21.

The revenue receipts of the 184 cities included in the report amounted to $759,942,445, and were from sources and in amounts as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Property, business, and poll taxes | $474,530,683 |
| Licenses and permits | 50,348,936 |
| Special assessments | 66,395,107 |
| Departmental fees, charges, rents, and sales | 15,200,254 |
| Fines and forfeits | 3,726,087 |
| Eschcats | 96,623 |
| Subventions and grants | 29,078,983 |
| Gifts, donations, and pension contributions | 4,340,591 |
| Interest | 24,122,829 |
| Rents and privileges | 8,904,880 |
| Public service enterprises | 83,197,472 |

Of the total revenue receipts of the 184 cities the eighteen cities having a population of over 300,000 each received $504,987,016, and the City of New York alone received $197,779,833.

Revenue Receipts of the Cities.

The per capita revenue receipts for the 184 cities amounted to $27.82. For the cities of over 300,000 inhabitants they were $33.24, while for the cities of from 30,000 to 50,000 inhabitants they were $18.63. The larger part of such receipts was from property, business and poll taxes, the per capita being, for all cities, $17.37, and for the two groups of cities above mentioned $21.54 and $11,58, respectively.

The governmental cost payments of the 184 cities amounted to $855,599,192, of which $449,219,789 was for expenses other than of public service enterprises, $92,847,248 for interest and $279,145,899 for outlays. The governmental cost payments of the 184 cities exceeded their revenue receipts by $95,656,747, though their revenue receipts exceeded their payments for expenses and interest by $183,489,152, from which it appars that with slight modification for changes in cash balances at the beginning and close of the year of the costs of permanent properties acquired and constructed during the year 65.7 per cent. was paid from revenues and 34.3 per cent. directly or indirectly from non-revenue receipts.

The gross payments for expenses other than of public service enterprises amounted for the 184 cities to $449,219,789, distributed as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| General government | $53,402,487 |
| Protection to person and property | 111,982,648 |
| Health conservation and sanitation | 44,330,456 |
| Highways | 54,778,717 |
| Charities, hospitals, and corrections | 29,621,797 |
| Education | 133,533,813 |
| Recreation | 16,108,808 |
| Miscellaneous | 5,511,063 |

The gross payments for expenses of public service enterprises amounted to $34,386,256, of which $25,606,229, or 74.5 per cent., represents the expenses of systems of water supply operated by these cities. Such systems were operated by 138 of the 184 cities.

The per capita Governmental cost payments for the 184 cities were $31.32, of which $17.71 was for expenses, $3.40 for interest, and $10.22 for outlays. The total for the group of eighteen of the larger cities was $37.15, while that for a group of seventy-five of the smaller cities was $19.66.

Swindling by Mail

In the Postmaster General's annual report it is stated that more than 4,000 cases involving a fraudulent use of the mails by swindling promoters were investigated last year by the Department's Inspectors. More than 1,000 of the men were arrested, and hundreds were convicted. In the last two years, the report says these men have obtained $100,000,000 by insidious advertising.

The New York Times rejects many thousands of lines yearly of misleading advertisements accepted by other newspapers.

The Times, in its endeavors to keep its pages free from objectionable announcements, offers a reward of $100 for the detecton and conviction of any person who makes a fraudulent representation in its advertising columns.

BALTIC SAILOR LEAPS INTO SEA IN STORM

His Mates, Who Kept Him Back When He Tried Before, Unable to Save Him.

PILOT CAME ALL THE WAY

Gale Prevented His Leaving Ship at Queenstown, and He Enjoys First Visit Here in 30 Years.

The White Star liner Baltic arrived yesterday from Liverpool a day late, with one lifeboat smashed to pieces, two others split by the sea, and one of her able seamen missing. She brought the Queenstown pilot over to New York because it was too rough for him to go off in his boat.

Capt. Ranson said that it was a succession of gales and high seas from the time she left Queenstown until the liner arrived off the Ambrose Channel Lightship yesterday morning. According to the log the worst day's run was from Wednesday to Thursday noon, when she only made 250 miles. At 3 A. M. Wednesday, during the middle watch, a big sea rolled right over the hurricane deck, smashing the port emergency boat and seriously damaging two others that were on the shocks. The same sea went over the skylights, and, smashing the glass, let water into the engine room and one of the saloons.

About 2 A. M. on Thursday Patrick Ward, 26 years old, unmarried, of Liverpool, suddenly rushed up on deck out of the foc'sle and jumped over the port side of the deck forward into the heaving billows, and was seen no more. Capt. Ranson stopped the ship and circled around an illuminated life buoy that had been thrown overboard, but no trace of the man could be seen.

His shipmates believed that Ward had been suffering from melancholia since the ship left Liverpool, and it was learned afterward that he had attempted to go over the side on Wednesday, but had been held back.

When he came out of the foc'sle the last time the man was fully dressed, and asked one of the sailors who had just come down from the crow's nest to send word to his two sisters in Liverpool if anything happened to him. He went on deck and two of the crew followed, but were too late to hold him as he jumped over the port rail.

John Cotter, the Queenstown pilot, who stands six feet six inches, and is a powerfully built man, said that he had enjoyed the trip to New York immensely, as he had not been here for thirty years. He intends to see all the sights before going back on the Baltic next Thursday, he said.

WON'T MEET STRIKERS.

Head of Clothing Trade Association Says It Is Opposed to Closed Shop.

Eugene S. Benjamin, President of the New York Clothing Trade Association, denied yesterday that his association and the three associations affiliated with it contemplated reopening negotiations with the United Garment Workers' Union of America with a view to settling the men's garment strike.

"It is true that the State Bureau of Mediation has sent us several letters asking that we meet the union officials in conference," said Mr. Benjamin. "But to all these letters we have given the same reply—that we are unalterably opposed to anything but the open shop, and that we will not deal with the union. The most recent letter addressed to us by the State Bureau of Mediation contained a quotation from a letter sent by me to my employes. A copy of this letter was never given to the bureau by me. It came to the bureau through some other source and it was used, I believe, to influence our attitude regarding the proposed mediation."

Miss Gertrude Barnum, special organizer for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, said yesterday that steps now under way to aid the strikers financially would enable the strikers to hold out indefinitely.

Much money is expected from the plan devised by ministers of the city, under which persons will subscribe $5 a week for the girls' strike fund. The ministers who have made this appeal to the public for funds are the Rev. J. Howard Melish of Brooklyn, the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, the Rev. Stephen S. Wise, the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, the Rev. John P. Peters, the Rev. Merle St. C. Wright, the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, the Rev. St. Clair Hester, the Rev. Frank Oliver Hall, the Rev. Henry E. Cobb, the Rev. Robert MacDonald, and the Rev. J. E. Price.

WANT CIVIL SERVICE PENSIONS

Government Would Benefit by Retiring Aged Men, McKee Says.

More than three hundred and fifty letter carriers of the city attended a meeting of the New York Branch of the National Civil Service Pension Association yesterday afternoon in the Harlem Masonic Temple, Lenox Avenue and 125th Street, and applauded A. W. McKee, their President, when he informed them that the committee of the National Civic Federation, appointed to look into the matter of pensioning Federal employes, took the stand that if an employe was taxed a certain part of his salary for a pension fund, the Government should deposit an equal amount to the fund.

"It is not from an entirely selfish standpoint that we ask the direct civil pension," said Mr. McKee, "because we realize that it is better for the Government to retire its superannuated employes and replace them with more efficient men."

Congressman Joseph A. Goulden of the Twenty-third District pledged the men his support in passing a bill through Congress providing for a direct civil pension, which he said he considered the best kind.

GOV. WILSON DEFINES 'THE NEW FREEDOM'

In a Book Bearing That Title He Calls It Emancipation from All Forms of Slavery.

OUTLINES HIS INTENTIONS

Business Must Be Untrammeled, Industry Humanized, and Politics Purified by Open-Air Action.

A new book by Gov. Woodrow Wilson, entitled "The New Freedom," will make its appearance to-day. According to the publishers, it is the first time in the history of this country that a President-elect on the eve of his inauguration has addressed to the country a profession of his faith and a statement of his intentions. Gov. Wilson, it appears from the preface, is not quite sure whether he ought to have credit for writing the book. He says the book is the result of the editorial literary skill of William Bayard Hale, who put together in their right sequence the more suggestive parts of Mr. Wilson's campaign speeches.

As told in the preface, Gov. Wilson has attempted to set forth in large terms which may stick in the imagination "what it is that must be done if we are to restore our politics to their full spiritual vigor again and our National life—whether in trade, in industry, or in what concerns us only as families and individuals—to its purity, its self-respect, and its pristine strength and freedom. The New Freedom is only the old revised and clothed in the unconquerable strength of modern America."

His Vision of the New Freedom.

Freedom Gov. Wilson defines in one of the closing chapters in these terms:

"The greatest thought one can have of freedom is as a gift that shall release men and women from all that pulls them back from being their best and from doing their best; that shall liberate their energy to its fullest limit, free their aspirations till no bounds confine them, and fill their spirits with the jubilance of realizable hope."

All his energies will be used, the President-elect says, to bring about the New Freedom. He says that it is a "vision" which has come to Democrats because of "the long endurance of exile." Here is the "vision" which is to be the main prop in the new President's programme:

"We must put heart into the people by taking the heartlessness out of politics, business and industry. We have got to make politics a thing in which an honest man can take his part with satisfaction because he knows that his opinion will count as much as the next man's, and that the boss and the interests have been dethroned.

"Business we have got to untrammel, abolishing tariff favors, and railroad discrimination, and credit denials, and all forms of unjust handicaps against the little man. Industry we have got to humanize, not through the trusts but through the direct action of law guaranteeing protection against dangers and compensation for injuries, guaranteeing sanitary conditions, proper hours, the right to organize, and all the other things which the conscience of the country demands as the workingman's right.

"We have got to cheer and inspirit our people with the sure prospects of social justice and due reward, with the vision of the open gates of opportunity for all. We have got to set the energy and the initiative of this great people absolutely free, so that the future of America will be greater than the past, so that the pride of America will grow with achievement, so that America will know as she advances from generation to generation that each brood of her sons is greater and more enlightened than that which preceded it, know that she is fulfilling the promise that she has made to mankind."

Drastic Reforms to Come.

This process of "release, emancipation, and inspiration," Gov. Wilson points out, requires many drastic reforms. He names the wrongs and tells what must be done with them. The tariff and the trusts and Wall Street come in for a good share of criticism. The testimony of J. P. Morgan and others before the Pujo Committee in Washington has not convinced Gov. Wilson that there is no Money Trust.

The early chapters constitute a plea for the return of the Government into the hands of the people. Gov. Wilson objects to the guardianship of men of affairs; he objects to consulting, chiefly or exclusively, the capitalists and manufacturers on tariff and currency legislation. In the chapter entitled "Life Comes From the Soil" he speaks of "that great, voiceless multitude of men who constitute the great body and the saving force of the Nation." Public opinion, he says in the succeeding chapter, on "The Parliament of the People," is not formulated in the privacy of Congressional committee rooms, but rather in the country, on the farms, and around the stoves of village stores. In this connection the Governor tells a little story.

"In a lecture that I once gave," he says, "I said that public opinion was not typified on the streets of a busy city, but was typified around the stove in a country store, where men sat and probably chewed tobacco and spat into a sawdust box, and made up, before they got through, what was the neighborhood opinion both about persons and events, and then, inadvertently, I added this philosophical reflection, that, whatever might be said against the chewing of tobacco, this at least could be said for it—that it gave a man time to think between sentences. Ever since then I have been represented, particularly in the advertisements of tobacco firms, as in favor of the use of chewing tobacco!"

His Cure for Diseased Politics.

In a chapter entitled "Let There Be Light" Gov. Wilson advocates public exposure as a check for all bad practices of politics. He regards no air so wholesome as "the air of utter publicity," and says:

"You have got to cure diseased politics as we nowadays cure tuberculosis, by making all the people who suffer from it live out of doors; not only spend their days out of doors and walk around, but sleep out of doors: always remain in the open, where they will be accessible to fresh, nourishing, and revivifying influences.

"I, for one, have the conviction that government ought to be all outside and no inside. I, for my part, believe that there ought to be no place where anything can be done that everybody does not know about. It would be very inconvenient for some gentlemen, probably, if government were all outside, but we have consulted their susceptibilities too long already."

The initiative, referendum, and recall are treated only briefly. He favors them, excepting only the recall of Judges, where they are needed by the people to regain their right to representation. He aims to show in this connection, by a review of legislation under his leadership as Governor of New Jersey, that the people can get what they want if only they refuse to stand quietly by and see things done which they voted against. His arraignment of political "bosses" leaves no doubt that these will be most unwelcome guests at the White House.

As shedding light upon his intentions, the President-elect says in a later chapter:

"In all that I may have to do in public affairs in the United States, I am going to think of towns such as I have seen in Indiana, towns of the old American pattern, that own and operate their own industries, hopefully and happily. My thought is going to be bent upon the multiplication of towns of that kind and the prevention of the concentration of industry in this country in such a fashion and upon such a scale that towns that own themselves will be impossible. * * *

"The welfare, the very existence of the Nation rests at last upon the great mass of the people; its prosperity depends at last upon the spirit in which they go about their work in their several communities throughout the broad land. In proportion as her towns and her countrysides are happy and hopeful will America realize the high ambitions which have marked her in the eyes of all the world."

MOB BUFFETS HIKERS, NOW IN PHILADELPHIA

Insufficient Police Guard to Meet Marchers After They Crossed the Delaware.

SOME INSULTING CRIES

Suffragists the Storm Centre of Struggling Crowd—Marriage Proposal for Gen. Jones.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Feb. 16.—Gen. Rosalie Jones, accompanied by her small but faithful band of suffrage hikers on the march to Washington, crossed the Delaware this afternoon. The crossing of Gen. Jones attracted more attention than did the crossing of Gen. Washington. The suffragist pilgrims had walked through Camden surrounded by a crowd of men and women all hanging on the heels of the hikers anxious to get a glimpse of the leader. Ahead walked a delegation of Camden and Philadelphia women. When the ferryboat was reached there was a scramble to get on board, which threatened to carry some of the hikers and their escorts from their feet. Some of the male members of the party succeeded in getting a lane opened, and through it Gen. Jones led her company on board.

As upon that former occasion when another General crossed the Delaware, with much more discomfort, there was ice in the river. As the ferryboat went crunching across the stream Gen. Jones, Col. Ida Craft, and Corp. Martha Klatschken stood in the bow of the boat. Gen. Jones for the first time on the march carried an American flag. She carried this, she said, because she believed the crossing of the Army of the Hudson was to be an important event in the history of the struggle of the women of this country for the ballot. The crowd on the boat filled every bit of available space, and the pilgrims had to give much attention to maintaining their positions.

The landing of the brown-clad band in Philadelphia was accomplished with great difficulty. There were at least two thousand persons about the ferry house, mostly men and boys. Some of them had been waiting for the pilgrims since the early afternoon.

Police Couldn't Check Onrush.

The police apparently had not expected such a crowd to turn out and they were unable to check the rush that followed the appearance of the hikers. There were six policemen waiting and they struggled valiantly to protect the marchers from the crowd. Their efforts were at first without much effect, and a scene of confusion followed. Five yards from the ferry house Gen. Jones and her party were the storm centre of a howling, struggling mob. In the main the men and boys were good-natured and curiosity seemed to be the reason for the demonstration. It was not in any sense, however, a sympathetic crowd, and very few were the good wishes extended to the party. Some of the remarks shouted were supposed to be humorous, but some were positively insulting.

In the first rush Gen. Jones had to cling to the arm of one of the male marchers, while Col. Craft hung upon the arm of her leader, shouting in a piping voice, "Votes for women; on to Washington." Her voice did not carry far above the din, but those who heard it began to shout and the cries were taken up by the crowd until the noise swelled into a roar of sound. The other members of the party almost fought their way to a place beside their leader. Corporal Klatschken would have been knocked down had it not been for young Milton Wend, the trumpeter. He carried her through the crowd. "On to Washington," she kept shouting as the young man struggled along. This increased the jeering of the crowd. Some distance ahead the yellow banner of the Cause could be seen wabbling about above the heads of the crowd. The standard bearer was having a hard time to hold it up and maintain her dignity at the same time. As the marchers started forward it required all the strength of the policemen to open a way.

Police Are Reinforced.

The confusion did not last for many blocks, for police reinforcements arrived and soon the pilgrims were swinging up the street with the fast increasing crowd keeping a comfortable distance away. The marchers stopped at the suffrage headquarters in the Hale Building, and after a sip of tea continued their way to the Hotel Walton.

While some suffragists of Philadelphia turned out to meet the Army of the Hudson, there were not so many of them as were expected. According to Miss Caroline Katzenstein, Secretary of the East District Pennsylvania Suffrage Association, Philadelphia women do not like to go out on Sunday afternoon. One of the hikers had another explanation. She said that in New Jersey and Pennsylvania suffrage bills were pending in the Legislatures, and the women of these States were afraid to do anything that might cause these bills to be defeated.

There was some comment because the name of Mrs. Rudolph Blankenburg, wife of the Mayor of Philadelphia and for twelve years President of the Pennsylvania Suffragist Association, did not appear upon the list of those invited to the dinner. It was said by Miss Katzenstein that Mrs. Blankenburg had been forgotten. The committee called her by telephone at the last minute, but she declined to attend the dinner. Mrs. Blankenburg, when seen at her home, 214 West Logan Square, did not seem to be worried over the failure to invite her to meet Gen. Jones and her army. She said that she had been out of town, and, besides this, it was her husband's birthday and she was entertaining some friends. She said that she was not active in suffrage just now.

Upon her arrival at the hotel, Gen. Jones retired for two hours. She was the guest of honor at the dinner. Mrs. William Albert Wood, Vice President of the County Society, was the Chairman. The General made a speech, and so did most of the pilgrims. Several Philadelphia suffragists also spoke.

Among those who attended the dinner were:

Mrs. Anna M. Orme, Mrs. Lawrence Lewis, Jr., Miss Mary Ingham, Mrs. Wilfred Lewis, President of Equal Franchise Society of Philadelphia; Mrs. William Albert Wood, Miss Caroline Katzenstein, George F. Holmes, Mrs. Charles H. Goudiss, Dr. Maud Bowyer, Dr. Mary Getty, Mrs. M. C. Klingelsmith, Miss Harriet Dulles, Mrs. George A. Piersol, leader of the Woman Suffrage Party of Philadelphia; Miss Mary Winsor, President of Limited Suffrage League; Miss Jane Burgess, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Haws, Mrs. Anna Lowenburg, Miss Ida Katzenstein, Dr. Kate Baldwin, Mrs. L. W. Martin, Dr. Clara T. Dercum, Miss Fannie Witherspoon, Miss Cornelia Greenough, Mrs. A. F. Fleck, Mrs. M. Paul, Mrs. McConomy, Mrs. Ellen H. Price, Miss Eleanor Wood, Mrs. Stephen Large, Mrs. Margaret Kelly, Mrs. William Spence Harvey, Mrs. John Lewis Gross, Mrs. A. E. Burns, President Woman Suffrage Party of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. E. Brown, Mrs. A. R. Purdy.

The March from Burlington.

The army of the Hudson began the advance from Burlington upon Philadelphia shortly after 9 o'clock in the morning. The sky was clear, the temperature suitable for walking, and the roads were in good condition. Just as Gen. Jones was leaving the hotel she found three pennies in the street. She said, with a smile, that she hoped her luck would not change. She had been so successful upon the hike to Albany and thus far upon this hike that her army had come to speak of "Jones luck."

Perhaps Gen. Jones was pleased also because of a letter found in the morning mail. This was written by a veteran of the civil war living in Chicago. It contained the third proposal of marriage Gen. Jones had received since she began to take an active part in the fight for the ballot. It read:

> Dear Rosalie Gardiner Jones—
>
> I have seen your picture in the papers, and I read what you're doing to further a great cause. I lost a leg at Chancellorsville for a great cause, so I sympathize with you. I just know how tired your little feet must be. When this march is over I should like to have the chance of smoothing the road before them for the rest of our lives. You may say I am old and you are young—but what of that? I may have but one leg, but my heart is bigger than the heart of any two men. Why don't you rest your tired little head upon it. Just say the word and I am yours. Other men might be afraid of you because you have so much nerve, but I can understand you. We are both soldiers. Say, little one, if you will join forces with me I will give you anything your little heart desires.

Accident to Col. Craft.

The most serious accident of the day happened shortly after Burlington was left behind. Col. Craft, tramping down the line, lost eight hairpins, and the first she knew of her loss was when her hair fell down and the braid began bobbing about her neck. Col. Craft was much perturbed by the accident. Gen. Jones, sympathizing with her, called a halt. None of the pilgrims had a surplus supply of hairpins. At the suggestion of one of the hikers each one of the women gave one hairpin, and soon the Colonel was again upon the march. The pilgrims were escorted three miles upon their journey by Agnes Marter, 10 years old, and Helen Murphy, a girl of 7 years. The girls wore red sweaters. Across the front were pinned the yellow badges of the cause. Both told Gen. Jones that they would be marchers if they were "growed up." The hikers were also joined by six members of the Wanderlust Club of this city, three men and three women. Roy Trolsen and William Johnson of Erie, Penn., also joined the march to-day. There are now as many men as women in the ranks. The army stopped to cheer in front of the house of John Champ, near Burlington. From a flagpole by the house fluttered a "Votes for Women" flag.

The pilgrims carried their luncheon with them. The delegation of Boy Scouts, under Patrol Master Robert Taylor, looked after the extra load. The boys accompanied the suffragists all the way to Camden. At Camden Lake a halt was called for luncheon. The pilgrims sat by the roadside, while the Boy Scouts gathered the material for a camp fire. Soon the coffee was ready to serve. It was an enjoyable break in the march. The women sang their battle songs and talked over the walk. They rested for nearly half an hour, and then Gen. Jones gave the order that set them once more upon the road.

The incident of the day of most interest to the women hikers was the visit to the Manless farm. This farm is just above Palmyra. Anna and Sally Hunter conduct it, and they are proud of the fact that they are making a success of farming without the help of any man. Both said that they had long been in favor of suffrage for women, and the presence of a body of women marching for that principle filled them with joy. One, the elder, said that she was sure that women could run the country without the help of men and do it more successfully than men. At that there was cheering.

At Bridgeboro the pilgrims halted and held a meeting. There was speaking by Gen. Jones and Col. Craft. As Col. Craft stepped down from the automobile the pilgrims began singing one of their songs. The tune is that of "Onward, Christian Soldiers." As they sang several women came out. They were evidently under the impression that it was a religious meeting. When they heard the words of the song they turned and walked back into their houses.

The arrival of the hikers in Camden caused some excitement. At the home of Mrs. Alfred Laury, 330 Cooper Street, the pilgrims halted. There was a crowd of several hundred persons about the house. The police had to make a way for the hikers. While the pilgrims were resting one of the local speakers talked to the crowd. Then came the jostling march to the ferry.

There is some doubt as to whether or not Minerva Crowell will be able to continue the march. She was assisted to walk into Camden by a policeman. The army's ranks will be kept filled, however, for two new hikers will join to-morrow. They are Mrs. B. W. Rulon, a Southern woman now living here, and Miss Helen Bergmarck, a Colorado girl now living in Philadelphia with her mother.

Gen. Jones, Col. Craft, Mrs. Wend, and Elizabeth Freeman are the guests of Miss Mary Winsor at the Woman's College Club to-night. The army will move to Chester to-morrow morning. It had been intended to go to Derby, but word was received that the town was under quarantine. The students of the University of Pennsylvania will greet the hikers as they start out to-morrow. The army covered nineteen miles to-day.

TIPS IN THE BILL IN ONE HOTEL NOW

Ten Per Cent. on Checks of More Than 50 Cents Goes to the Waiter at The Breslin.

SAY IT SOLVES THE PROBLEM

Tips Can't Be Abolished, They Found, but This Plan Relieves Guests from Paying Twice.

The management of the Hotel Breslin has discovered a solution of the apparently hopeless tip problem, Manager D. B. Mulligan is confident. After testing out his scheme for a week he announces that he has solved the tipping evil to the complete satisfaction of all parties concerned, in spite of the fact that the giving and receiving of gratuities is part of modern human nature and will probably continue to the end of time.

About a year ago Manager Mulligan began a crusade against the hat-check tipping system, and discharged several hat girls in succession for accepting forbidden tips. But in the end he found it impossible to abolish the custom, not because he was unable to get employes who would not accept tips, but because most people insisted on giving a tip to the girls, and some of them would become positively indignant when the gratuity was refused.

"This convinced me," said Mr. Mulligan yesterday, "that any solution of the tipping problem in the dining rooms must be an indirect one. I was convinced that it would be useless to forbid employes to accept tips, as many guests would insist on giving them, and a hotel manager could not presume to dictate to his patrons as to what they did with their money.

"Now the accepted proportion which the average tip given the waiter bears to the meal check is about 10 per cent. Some diners give more, but this percentage is as near the average as we could figure it. If waiters were to receive 10 per cent. tips on all meals they serve they would make a good income.

"As it would have been a work of supererogation to have tried to abolish the giving and taking of tips, I decided to give our patrons at all meals—breakfast, luncheon, dinner, and after-theatre supper—a reduction of 10 per cent. on all checks more than 50 cents."

Assistant Manager Noble said that they had tried out the scheme for a week, having put it into effect last Monday. Notice of the 10 per cent. reduction is printed in red ink across the top of every bill of fare, and, while nothing is said about tipping, most patrons understand that the reduction was made as an effort to solve the tipping problem.

"If hotels could only absolutely abolish tipping, which I personally would be most heartily in favor of doing," added the manager, "if it were practicable, it would be a boon to the service. I think we have hit upon an acceptable solution—at least, the patrons of the Breslin think so. One of our permanent guests, a man who has traveled all over the world, told me that it was the only sensible plan he had ever known to handle the tipping problem in such a way that the guest is not forced to bear the burden of paying twice for services rendered."

MISS WILSON'S NEW WORK.

President-Elect's Eldest Daughter Conducts Social Centre Campaign.

The workers for the socialization of the public schools, who are conducting a Nation-wide campaign to obtain favorable legislation in the various States, have enlisted the hearty support of President-elect Wilson and his daughter, Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson.

As far back as the first National convention of the Social Centre Association in 1911 Gov. Wilson made the principal address, and he recently recommended to the New Jersey Legislature the enactment of laws to open the public schools of the State for social centre uses.

Miss Wilson has lately become actively interested in the movement, and has turned to the General Federation of Women's Clubs as an agency which can give material assistance in obtaining in all the States the enactment of laws similar to those proposed in New Jersey and New York, and already in operation in Wisconsin. As Vice Chairman of the National Social Centre Legislative Committee, she has written to Mrs. Percy V. Pennypacker, President of the General Federation, asking her to set in motion State legislative campaigns, and has received from Mrs. Pennypacker an expression of hearty sympathy.

The Sage Foundation in its Department of Recreation, is co-operating with Miss Wilson and the Federation, and is furnishing literature on the subject of social centres to those who are enlisted for the legislative campaign. In this literature the Foundation gives this tentative definition of a social centre: "A community may be said to have a schoolhouse social centre if one of its school buildings is thrown open to the public on one or more fixed nights a week for at least twelve weeks a year for activities of a social, recreational or civic character regularly directed by one or more trained leaders."

According to a report just issued by the Sage Foundation, forty-four cities now maintain social centres at which there are paid workers, as against fifteen cities two years ago. In nineteen of these at least some of the workers are paid by the Board of Education. Fifty-seven other cities reported schoolhouses known as social or recreation centres, though they were conducted entirely by volunteer workers. Three hundred and thirty-eight schools in the 101 cities heard from are used as social centres. The total annual expenditure of school boards and voluntary agencies on social centres is $139,535.73.

HELPED TO FINANCE ROOSEVELT'S HUNT

Mystery as to Who Met the Expenses of His African Trip Is Partly Cleared.

COLONEL PAID TWO-FIFTHS

Smithsonian Institution's Partial List of Contributors Reveals Well-Known Names and Ex-Confreres.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The four years' mystery as to who paid the expenses of Col. Theodore Roosevelt's African hunting expedition of 1909-1910 has been partially cleared by Dr. Charles D. Walcott, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. According to Dr. Walcott, even Col. Roosevelt did not know, until a few days ago, who were the contributors to his hunt fund, with the exception of Andrew Carnegie and possibly one or two personal friends. Dr. Walcott did not say so, but it is presumed that Col. Roosevelt got his information as to Mr. Carnegie's contribution from the statement made by Mr. Carnegie himself in the Presidential primary campaign of 1912.

In an official announcement on the subject Dr. Walcott, in behalf of the Smithsonian Institution, makes known the names of some of those who contributed to the expenses of Col. Roosevelt's trip, but he explains that the list is not complete, as it contains only the names of those persons who were willing that their contributions should become public. The list as furnished by Dr. Walcott is as follows:

Edward D. Adams of New York, Robert Bacon of New York, (Assistant Secretary of State, then Secretary of State under Col. Roosevelt, and Ambassador to France under President Taft;) the late Cornelius N. Bliss of New York, (Treasurer of the Republican National Committee in the Roosevelt Presidential campaign in 1904;) James Campbell of St. Louis, W. Bayard Cutting of New York, Andrew Carnegie, Cleveland H. Dodge, the New York banker; E. H. Gary of New York, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the United States Steel Corporation; John Hays Hammond of Gloucester, Mass., President of the National League of Republican Clubs; Col. H. L. Higginson, the Boston banker; Hennen Jennings of Washington, who became wealthy through his interest in South African diamond mines; the late J. S. Kennedy, the New York millionaire, who left a large fortune to charitable and church institutions; Ralph King of Cleveland, George Von L. Meyer of Hamilton, Mass., (Ambassador to Italy and Russia, and Postmaster General under President Roosevelt, and the present Secretary of the Navy;) D. O. Mills of New York, brother-in-law of the late Whitelaw Reid; Truman H. Newberry of Detroit, (Secretary of the Navy under President Roosevelt;) L. L. Nunn of Provo, Utah; H. Cleveland Perkins of Washington, another wealthy South African diamond mine owner; George W. Perkins of New York, Henry Phipps of Pittsburgh and New York, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid of New York, Elihu Root of New York, (Secretary of War, and afterward Secretary of State in President Roosevelt's Cabinet;) J. C. Rosengarten of Philadelphia; Jacob H. Schiff and Isaac L. Seligman, the New York bankers; O. M. Stafford of Cleveland, Oscar S. Straus of New York, (Secretary of Commerce and Labor in President Roosevelt's Cabinet,) and the late Isidor Straus of New York, who lost his life in the Titanic disaster.

In making public the names of these contributors Secretary Walcott stated that from their contributions the Smithsonian Institution paid three-fifths of all the expenses of the hunting expedition and that the other two-fifths was paid by Col. ## HANNA'S JOURNALISM SCHOOL

Cleveland Publisher Gives $10,000 a Year to Found It at Western Reserve.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 16.—Announcement was made to-day that Dan R. Hanna, publisher of the Cleveland Leader and News, had offered $10,000 annually to Western Reserve University for the foundation of a school of journalism.

The school will probably be opened at the beginning of the next school year, although plans are not to be announced for the present. The chief difficulty to be surmounted at the start is the finding of a director.

Both men and women will be admitted as students. The school will be co-ordinated with the other professional schools of the university. Courses at once practical and theoretical will be offered in all forms of journalism, but particularly in editorial and news writing. English, French, and German, as well as American journalism will be considered.

Assurances have been received that some of the Cleveland papers will be used as laboratories of the school.

FRIGHT MAY HAVE KILLED HIM

George Bush of Greenwich Died an Hour After Entering Hospital.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 16.—George Bush, a member of a prominent family here, died at the Greenwich General Hospital last night, one hour after he had been admitted, and it is believed by many that horror at entering a hospital affected his heart action and hastened his end.

He had been ailing for a few days, but was about the village last evening, and was taken ill in a store. The physician who was summoned found evidences of pneumonia and placed him in an automobile to be taken to the hospital, three miles away. Bush expressed his fear at going, saying: "I've always been afraid of a hospital, although I have never been in one, and I know I'll die if I'm taken to one."

The physician laughed, and Bush finally agreed to go. His death is ascribed to the combination of a congested lung and weak heart. He was 65 years old and unmarried.

ROB BROADWAY FURNISHER.

Store at 55th Street Entered After 6 in the Morning.

A thief entered the men's furnishing store of F. J. Bunnell, on the northeast corner of Broadway and Fifty-fifth Street, between 9:30 Friday evening and 8 o'clock Saturday morning, and made away with clothing and jewelry valued at more than $500.

Detective Moore found evidence to convince him that the robbery was committed after 6 o'clock Saturday morning and the loot taken away in three boxes.

The thief had little appreciation of the value of the goods, as many inexpensive neckties were taken and valuable ones were left behind.

ARMY TESTS PLEASE HIGH OFFICIALS

Last Week's Mobilization Orders Obeyed with Gratifying Precision.

ACTUAL WAR METHODS USED

Gen. Wood Expects New System to Obviate Evils of Unpreparedness Felt in Former Wars.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—President Taft, Secretary Stimson, Major-Gen. Wood, and many other officials and officers prominent in the administrative responsibilities of the army are greatly pleased with the tests made during the past week of the new organization of the army into brigades and divisions. Four brigades have received orders to be in readiness for prompt entraining to the nearest seaport available for army transports in a general plan of mobilization. There has been a great diminution of red tape in these orders. Everything has worked out with the precision of a well-made and well-lubricated machine, according to War Department officials.

The regular army since Feb. 6 has been directed under brigade formation and with the machinery of command employed during the Spanish and the civil wars. This is the first trial of this plan in time of peace. The organization requires further development to secure all that is aimed at in the plans of the general staff, but hereafter the officers commanding divisions will have entire charge of the administrative functions, and those in command of brigades will devote themselves to drilling their troops so that regiments and all organizations may be co-ordinated in practice and become adjusted to the military needs of the organization.

"Our object is to have a war organization of the army in time of peace, so that it will be ready for war when it comes suddenly, as all wars do," said Major Gen. Leonard Wood, when asked to-day for a brief explanation of the recent orders regarding new tactical divisions and commands in the army. "At the beginning of every war," the General continued, "this country has suffered defeat, loss of life, vast expenditures and a useless prolongation of war, with all its attendant miseries, because it has been utterly unprepared; the army was not organized or prepared when the war began, and the commanders of larger units, such as brigades and divisions, had had no opportunity to handle such before. So far as we can, we intend to mitigate the evils of unpreparedness by having a semblance of a real army organization and giving officers and men the practical training and experience they need to fit them for soldiers.

"We expect to give brigade commanders responsibility for training tactical brigades and handling them in manoeuvres at least once a year. It is the intention to relieve these commanders of administrative work, leaving their hands free for straight military service. We also intend to have an organized brigade ready for service at all times, so that, if it is necessary to send it abroad, such a brigade can be designated and ready to move at once.

"What has been done is but a starter. We have gone as far as we can administratively. In order to complete a redistribution of troops so that the plans for effective organization, as contemplated by the general staff, may be put in operation we shall have to obtain appropriations from time to time in order to bring the organizations together for proper training.

"Under the new system the division commanders will look after the administration of the army, leaving the brigade commander free to train the troops. It is absolutely necessary that regiments be brought together and assembled in brigades at different times in order that Colonels and other field officers, as well as Generals, shall have experience in handling their commands as actual tactical units.

"By the new system the coast artillery will be under its own officers and handled as a branch of the army, and instead of the army being in jumbled lots, as heretofore, with cavalry, infantry, field artillery, and coast artillery in small detachments under one command, the various arms will be under their own officers for military training, and under a divisional commander for administrative purposes."

Advises Nevada Mooser to Prepare for It Four Years Hence.

Special to The New York Times.

RENO, Feb. 16.—Col. Roosevelt reveals that he is thinking about the "next fight" in a letter he has written to Judge Dewitt C. Turner of this city, showing that he intends to carry on a progressive campaign four years hence.

Judge Turner had recently written to Col. Roosevelt, asking him "what was to be done next." He inquired what the Colonel would suggest as a fitting occupation for the Bull Moosers in the interim. The answer came as follows:

The Outlook,
New York, Feb. 13.

My Dear Judge Turner—

Many thanks for your letter. I hope that our friends in Nevada, and in every part of the Union, for that matter, will now proceed to perfect their organization, so that we may be ready for the next fight. Our object should be to perfect precinct organizations in every county. Sincerely yours, T. ROOSEVELT.

Other subjects of a non-political nature were discussed in the letter.

ROBIN GOT MILLION, VAN TUYL ASSERTS

Banking Superintendent Tells Governor He Was Justified in Prosecuting Northern's Head.

NO FACTS AGAINST GIFFORD

State Official, Answering Cameron's Charges, Explains Why He Didn't Sue—Denies Persecuting Banker.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 16.—George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., State Superintendent of Banks, has delivered to Gov. Sulzer an elaborate defense on the charges made against his department a few days ago in connection with the manner in which the affairs of the Northern Bank of New York have been handled since the Banking Department closed that institution's doors and took hold with a view of winding up its business.

The charges were made by William Duncan Cameron, a lawyer representing Joseph G. Robin, who as President and Director of this institution and the Washington Savings Bank, pleaded guilty to having stolen $27,000 from the depositors of the latter concern. Robin is in prison. Mr. Cameron, backed by a committee of depositors, in making his charges against Mr. Van Tuyl, assert Robin was innocent, was suffering imprisonment largely because of persecution by the State Superintendent.

Mr. Van Tuyl's defense, covering many typewritten pages and accompanied by much correspondence, court records, and statements of Robin's multifarious transactions, was made public here to-day by the Governor.

These are the charges made against the Banking Department by Mr. Cameron:

The Banking Department has refused and neglected to prosecute a claim leading to the recovery of $350,000 or the damages which were caused to the depositors of the bank through the refusal of James M. Gifford to accept a loan of $350,000 tendered just prior to the Northern Bank being closed by the Banking Department.

The department has failed to sue James M. Gifford on account of his having obtained, as alleged by the complainant, large sums of money from the Northern Bank through the instrumentality of the Melrose Securities Company, a dummy corporation.

Refers to Gifford Contract.

The department failed to present evidence upon the trial of the claim of Messrs. Gifford, Hobbs & Beard for $15,000 on account of legal services, which would have shown that Joseph G. Robin was not an officer or Director of the Hamilton Bank, one of the predecessors of the Northern Bank, at the time when, according to the testimony of James M. Gifford, a certain contract was entered into between himself and Robin for the employment of his firm as attorneys, and that when complainant called this matter to the attention of the department it failed to make application to have such judgment set aside upon the ground that fraud had been practiced upon the court and upon the depositors, and has neglected to take steps to recover the moneys which, as complainant alleges, were literally stolen in this manner from the depositors.

The Banking Department has neglected and refused to take such steps as are necessary to secure the assets of the Commonwealth Construction Company for the payment of its debts to the Northern Bank and to the Bankers' Realty and Security Company, another debtor of the Northern Bank, complainant, alleging that such assets were illegally diverted by one Charles A. Voetech, a clerk in the office of Messrs. Gifford, Hobbs & Beard.

The Banking Department sold for $204 bonds of the La France Copper Company of the par value of $170,000, worth $10,000 or $15,000.

Mr. Van Tuyl, in his letter to Gov. Sulzer, takes up each charge separately. In regard to the first charge, the Superintendent asserts that the only action that could have been taken would have been a suit for damages against Mr. Gifford, who was counsel to the Northern Bank, on the ground that he had fraudulently conspired with the Directors to wreck that institution. Then Mr. Van Tuyl says:

Asserts Evidence Is Lacking.

"There are no facts contained in Mr. Cameron's communication nor is this department in possession of any evidence whatever which would indicate that any such action would lie. As a matter of fact, if the Northern Bank had been presented with $350,000 in cash on the day in question it would still have been hopelessly insolvent. The department is informed that this so-called offer of assistance was made by Messrs. Reichmann and Cummins of the Carnegie Trust Company, an institution which at that time was itself on the verge of failure, and within ten days thereafter was closed by this department."

Concerning the second charge, Mr. Van Tuyl shows how he pursued through the courts the claim against the Melrose Securities Company, a dummy corporation formed to enable Robin to get control of the majority stock of the Hamilton Bank from William R. Montgomery, President of that institution, who is serving a prison sentence for wrecking it. A judgment was obtained for $138,000, but there were no assets from which to satisfy it.

"So far as this department has been able to ascertain from a careful examination of the books and records of the Northern Bank," says Mr. Van Tuyl, "there is no legal evidence, other than Robin's unsupported word, which was rejected by Referee Hall, which tends to show that James M. Gifford is liable to the Northern Bank on account of these loans to the Melrose Securities Company. If the complainant will present any evidence upon which the department could reasonably expect to succeed in holding any party other than Robin liable for these moneys which were appropriated from the assets of the Northern Bank, through the instrumentality of the Melrose Securities Company, the department would be pleased to take prompt action."

Regarding the third charge, that the department paid $15,000 for the assets of the bank, without warrant, to Gifford, Hobbs & Beard for legal services, Mr. Van Tuyl shows that he consulted Justice Blanchard of the Supreme Court and that ex-Justice Ernest Hall, whom Justice Blanchard named as referee to hear testimony on the question, rendered an opinion on June 13, 1911, recommending that the amount be allowed and the objection of Joseph G. Robin to its payment be set aside.

In reply to the fourth charge, Mr. Van Tuyl asserts that the Commonwealth Construction Company, a Pennsylvania corporation, went into bankruptcy on Dec. 5 of last year.

Receiver Sifting the Facts.

"This department is informed," he adds, "that the receiver named is engaged in investigating the very complicated affairs of the Commonwealth Construction Company, and that he expects shortly to take action to recover from the Continental Public Works Company, and from those interested therein, any property which was illegally diverted from the Commonwealth Construction Company, and to distribute the proceeds pro rata among the creditors of the Commonwealth Construction Company, including the Northern Bank. This department intends to support Mr. Barney in the efforts which he is making in this direction, and expects eventually to realize something on these notes. The information of the department is, however, that the assets of the Commonwealth Construction Company were worth much less than $40,000, the amount mentioned in Mr. Cameron's communication."

In regard to the charge that the department sold the La France Copper Company's bonds, worth $10,000 or $15,000, for $204, Mr. Van Tuyl shows that the securities were sold at public auction after extensive advertising, and that, despite the fact that the auction rooms were thronged, this was the highest bid. The bonds had been deposited by Robin as collateral.

Replying generally to the charge that the department persecuted Robin, Mr. Van Tuyl says:

"Mr. Cameron criticises this department for what he characterizes as misdirected energy in 'pounding Robin.' Various suits have been instituted by this department on behalf of the Northern Bank against Robin to recover large sums of money which were borrowed by Robin from the bank. Robin is at present contesting his liability upon these obligations. The issues presented by the pleadings in these actions will be litigated in due course. It is also contemplated by this department to institute other civil proceedings aginst Mr. Robin as fast as it is possible to gather competent proof of the receipt by Robin of many hundred thousands of dollars of the assets of the Northern Bank, which passed from the bank into the accounts of numerous dummy corporations, organized under the direction of Robin and obviously for his benefit, and through which Robin obtained moneys from the Northern Bank without his name appearing as the actual borrower.

Says Robin Got $1,000,000.

"An amount of money considerably in excess of $1,000,000 was taken from the assets of the Northern Bank by means of these dummy corporations and by other subterfuges and later used for Robin's benefit.

"As to the responsibility of Mr. Robin to the people of the State of New York for violations of the criminal law, this department, of course, has no responsibility except in so far as the treatment of Mr. Robin at the hands of the State affects the future conduct of banking officials generally under the supervision of this department.

"At the time Mr. Robin was brought before the Supreme Court for sentence this department deemed it to be its duty to present to the District Attorney of New York County certain facts based on the records of the Northern Bank, showing the manner in which Mr. Robin had conducted himself as the controlling factor of this institution. These facts were presented to the District Attorney and Mr. Justice Seabury at their request, so that the Court might inform itself of the actual facts before imposing sentence upon Robin.

"Mr. Cameron undoubtedly is unfamiliar with the facts as shown in these communications to the District Attorney, otherwise he would certainly not be 'firmly convinced of Mr. Robin's innocence.' This deparment is firmly convinced that it has not erred in its judgment of the intentional and repeated violations of the criminal law by Robin in Northern Bank matters. This belief is strengthened by the fact that the State Insurance Department, which had had occasion to investigate Mr. Robin's transactions in other fields, has come definitely to the same conclusion."

TO WIN KENNEDY GIFT.

Bible Society Must Raise $44,000 to Get $22,000.

To comply with a conditional gift from Mrs. John S. Kennedy of $22,000 the New York Bible Society announced yesterday that it would be required to raise $44,000 to complete its endowment fund of $200,000. The Rev. Dr. George W. Carter, the General Secretary, asks those who are interested in the distribution of Bibles to immigrants, to sailors, and throughout the city, to aid the Society.

"When this fund is completed we will be able to furnish Bibles to the prisoners in all our prisons, and to reach the sick in the hospitals," said Dr. Carter. "We will reach many foreign people in our city that now have no knowledge of the Bible. We will be able to place Bibles in every hotel and lodging house, furnish every blind person with a special copy in raised type, and largely increase our work among the sailors and immigrants. The New York Bible Society is distributing the Bible in fifty-one languages, and for more than one hundred years has been carrying on this work in the city and harbor."

DIVIDING HIGHWAY FUNDS.

Of $50,000,000 Bond Issue $30,000,000 Will Improve County Roads.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 16.—The State Highway Department in a formal statement says that of the bond issue of $50,000,000 authorized by the electors last Fall to carry on the improvement of highways $20,000,000 will be used for State highways and $30,000,000 for the portion of the cost of county highways payable by the State. None of the county quota can be used for any other purpose. Attorney General Carmody said some time ago that the Legislature had no power to authorize Boards of Supervisors to permit the Highway Commission to reapportion funds.

The method of apportionment of the entire amount among counties is: First, on population as fixed by the Federal census of 1910; second, on the mileage of public highways outside of cities and villages as obtained pursuant to Section 69, Chapter 30, Laws of 1909; third, on the total area.

Two-fifths of the total amount of funds apportioned to any county must be expended in the county to construct or improve the portion of the State routes mentioned in Section 180 of the Highway law within the county, and three-fifths to pay the State's portion of the construction or improvement of county roads within its border, to be determined by the Highway Commission with the approval of the County Supervisors.

This method of apportionment, the Highway Commission says, created an interesting situation, as some counties had too much State or county mileage, while others had too little within their boundaries according to the apportionment of the funds.

Baseball Manager Has Narrow Escape When His Car Dashes Into Curb.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Cincinnati National League baseball team, narrowly escaped serious injury here last night in an accident in which his automobile was wrecked. Tinker's car had both front wheels torn off and the steering gear smashed.

Tinker said the accident was due to the sudden failure of a street lamp.

"I was nearing my home," he said, "when the electric lamp at the corner went out. I was blinded by the change, and, thinking I saw some one ahead of me, turned the car into the surb."

The machine was not overturned nor was Tinker thrown out.

GIANTS LEAVE FOR TRAINING CAMP

Manager McGraw and Five Players Lead Advance on Marlin —To Arrive Wednesday.

Manager John J. McGraw's campaign to bring his fifth National League pennant to the Polo Grounds was officially begun yesterday, when the little Napoleon started with five of his players for the long trip to the training camp at Marlin Springs, Texas. The start was made from the Pennsylvania Station at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and was accompanied by the usual amount of handshaking, flashlight photographs, and applause. There was also the usual amount of reticence on the part of McGraw when asked to make a prediction of what his team would accomplish in the 1913 race. McGraw has been sidestepping this same question since he became a manager, and it was an easy task yesterday.

President Harry Hempstead of the Giants and Secretary John B. Foster were at the station to see that the party was properly started. McGraw had a long conversation with President Hempstead, taking the occasion to express his delight over the five-year contract with its princely stipend which the New York owner had sent to him on Saturday afternoon. Secretary Foster was intrusted with the task of rounding up the players, and he breathed a sigh of relief when he got them all together.

The party is due to arrive in St. Louis this evening, and will spend only two hours in the Mound City. Assistant Secretary Eddie Brannick reached the latter city yesterday, and he will have everything in readiness for a speedy change and quick departure for Marlin. Coach Wilbert Robinson and Robby's 22-year-old son will board the Giants' train at Harrisburg. The others who have been delegated to make the early start will report to Brannick at St. Louis. Larry Doyle will be a member of the St. Louis additions, but the others will be battery men or youngsters. Infielders Groh and Stock, Outfielders Jacobson and Burns, and Pitchers Wiltse, Ames, Tesreau, Demaree, Schupp, Hanley, and Smith will complete the squad which starts from the Missouri metropolis to-night. Four other pitches—Cooper, Bader, Perryman, and Robertson—live in the South, and will go direct to Marlin from their homes.

The second squad of Giants is due to leave St. Louis on Feb. 27, and will arrive in Marlin on March 1. This will be made up of Otis Crandall, Arthur Wilson, Fred Merkle, Arthur Fletcher, Charley Herzog, Josh Devore, and Jack Murray. Chief Meyers and Fred Snodgrass will go direct to the training camp from their homes in California, and it is expected that Tilly Shafer will go at the same time. The club has heard nothing official from Rube Marquard as to whether he intends to report or not. Furthermore, McGraw announces that he is not worrying any about the Rube. He expects to have a good chance to look over his young talent before the regulars arrive ten days after McGraw's arrival. Wilbert Robinson, as usual, will be intrusted with the task of coaching the young pitchers.

Temporary President William H. Pfau of the newly organized New York and New Jersey Inter-State Baseball League has called a meeting of the promoters for to-morrow afternoon at the Hotel Cadillac. The meeting is called for the purpose of electing permanent officers, the adoption of the league constitution, and the appointing of a Schedule Committee. The five cities which were originally granted franchises will undoubtedly ratify the selection of Long Island City for the sixth city, and then close the membership. The Mayors of Newburg, Poughkeepsie, and Middletown are lending their support to the project, and prominent city officials in Kingston, Paterson, N. J., and Long Island City are also enrolled in assisting the promoters. Subscriptions amounting to about $5,000 have been raised in four of the six cities, and the other two have backing which seems to insure the success of the enterprise.

Barney Dreyfuss and Jimmy McAleer seem to be the hardest hit of the magnates by the holdout league. Five Pirates, including Marty O'Toole and Jack Miller, have yet to sign up, while McAleer is still waiting for contracts from Speaker, Hooper, Lewis, Carrigan, and three others of the champion Red Sox.

Rube Waddell Seriously Ill.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 16.—George Edward (Rube) Waddell of the Minneapolis American Association Baseball Club is dangerously ill, suffering from pneumonia, at the home of Manager Joe Cantillon at Hickman, Ky., according to information received here to-night. According to Mr. Cantillon, Waddell's condition is very serious and his chances for recovery are slight.

Speaker First of Red Sox to Resign.

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—President McAler of the champion Red Sox, sent word from Chicago to-night that "Tris" Speaker, the centrefielder, had signed his contract for 1913. Speaker is the first of the Boston regular outfit to sign for the coming season, and it is understood his new contract provides a substantial salary increase.

QUAKERS WIN AT SQUASH.

Newhall Captures Individual National Championship from Haines.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 16.—Philadelphia's squash racquet team, by defeating the Baltimore team in the final play here today of the National intercity championships, retained the championship they won last year.

The champions won four out of five matches and lost the fifth match by a small margin. They also won thirteen out of the fifteen games played by teams representing Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, and Toronto. Baltimore was second, with nine victories; Boston third, with five victories, and Toronto fourth, with three victories.

Morton L. Newhall of Philadelphia won the individual National championship by defeating H. A. Haines of Baltimore, 18 to 16.

Results of Soccer Games.

Winding up their schedule in the Metropolitan League the Albion F. C. won its last contest at Chelsea Park yesterday afternoon at the expense of the Hudson United team by the score of 2 to 0. The Albions are now in second place, and they have to wait and watch the result of the Fulton and Hudson elevens, as all three teams have a chance to win the championship. There are only three points dividing the three leaders.

Emulating the example set by Ralph Slade of the Albions, who made an American record for scoring goals last month, John Mannburg of the German F. C. tallied no less than five goals in a Metropolitan League game yesterday afternoon at Columbia Oval. The Germans' opponents were the St. George United eleven, and it went down to defeat by the score of 8 to 2.

By winning the New York State League game with the Yonkers F. C. at Hawthorne Field, Brooklyn, yesterday, the Camerons, one of the tailenders in the first division, saved themselves from being relegated into the second section. The score was 3 to 2.

At Van Cortlandt Park yesterday afternoon the Over-Seas soccer football eleven succumbed to the Columbia Oval team by the close score of 4 to 3.

First place in the first division of the New York State League was attained by the Brooklyn Celtics yesterday when they defeated the St. George F. C. team at Celtic Field, Brooklyn, by 5 to 2.

In a friendly game at Marquette Oval the Clan McDonald F. C. meted out a defeat to the New York Celtics by 8 to 1.

Gossip of the Golfers.

Unless fully a third of the clubs holding membership in the Metropolitan Golf Association speedily awake from their lethargic condition they will be compelled to worry along through the coming season without the names of their foremost players appearing on the handicap sheet. As the situation now stands, the following twenty-three clubs have failed to report:

Baltusrol Golf Club, Bedford Golf Club, Canoe Brook Country Club, Century Country Club, Deal Golf and Country Clu, Dunwoodie Country Club, Essex County Country Club, Fairview Country Club, the Golf Club of Glen Ridge, Hackensack Golf Club, the Haworth Club, the Country Club of Lakewood, National Golf Links of America, New York Newspaper Golf Club, Ocean Country Club, the Powelton Club, Princeton Golf Club, Richmond County Country Club, the Rockaway Hunting Club, Scarsdale Golf and Country Club, South Shore Field Club, St. Andrews Golf Club, and the Westfield Golf Club.

On Jan. 30 blanks were sent out to sixty-eight clubs, with the request that reports be returned not later than Feb. 7. Forty-four clubs have sent in the desired information, while one other has advised the committee that work on its report is under way.

CHANGE ATHLETIC DATES.

Yale and Harvard May Rearrange Baseball and Track Schedule.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 16.—Correspondence is in progress between Yale and Harvard athletic managers looking toward some important changes in the Spring events of the year, the clashes during Commencement Week. Indications are that the third and deciding game of the annual baseball series will be shifted from Saturday, June 21, to Tuesday, June 24, and that the dates for the annual rowing regatta on the Thames and for the proposed international track games may be changed from the original plan.

The baseball managers think that three games a week are too many for the old rivals, especially as the first is not scheduled till Tuesday. The two home-and-home matches of the series are listed for Tuesday, June 17, at New Haven, and for Wednesday, the next day, in Cambridge. The third was booked for June 21 in New York City. The two managers have decided that they do not wish to schedule it for Brooklyn, but to play it on the Polo Grounds. Brooklyn is scheduled to play on the Polo Grounds Saturday, June 21, and the National Leaguers do not wish to shift a Saturday game. Brooklyn is also scheduled for the Polo Grounds on June 24, but there is no opposition to shifting this game across Brooklyn Bridge in exchange for a later Polo Ground date by the two big leaguers.

There has been talk of having the international track meet at Harvard on Friday, June 20, and the rowing regatta at New London Thursday, June 19. Indications are that these two dates may be shifted. This would make the Yale-Harvard Commencement Week athletic programme as follows:

Tuesday, June 17—Harvard, at Yale Field; baseball.
Wednesday, June 18—Yale, at Cambridge; baseball.
Thursday, June 19—International track meet, Harvard Stadium.
Friday, June 20—Rowing regatta, New London.
Tuesday, June 24—Yale-Harvard baseball, at Polo Grounds, New York City.

KOLEHMAINEN BEATS QUEAL.

Finnish Runner Covers 15 Miles in Fast Time at Boston.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 16.—Hannes Kohlemainen, the Finnish distance runner, defeated Billy Queal, the American champion, in a fifteen mile race here last night, running in what was considered remarkably fast time, the distance being covered in one hour and 19 minutes and 57 seconds.

Appearing for the first time as a professional, Jim Thorpe, the Carlisle athlete, in the open professional events won everything, with the exception of the forty-yard dash, which went to Irving C. Porter of Cambridge. Thorpe won his events with ridiculous ease and in some he simply gave exhibitions, as the rest of the field, realizing the prowess of the Indian, did not care to compete with him. Thorpe made an effort to better the indoor high jump record, and, after six attempts, failed.

THREE RACES FOR ELLER.

Georgetown Flier Shows Good Form at Baltimore Meet.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 16.—J. Tait of Toronto, the Canadian one-mile champion, won the 800-yard open handicap last night at the annual track and field games conducted under the auspices of the Fifth Regiment Athletic Association and Johns Hopkins University at the Fifth Regiment Armory. Tait started from scratch and defeated a good field. Gilier, a local man, was second, and Rumbaugh of the University of Virginia third. The time was slow.

Patterson of the University of Pennsylvania captured the 100-yard handicap and Bob Eller of New York, representing Georgetown University, accounted for the 100-yard hurdles and 100 and 200-yard South Atlantic championships. Georgetown made an excellent showing, winning several events from competitors representing a dozen different colleges.

KIVIAT AFTER NEW TITLES.

America's Greatest Mile Runner Enters A. A. U. Championship Events.

The wonderful running of Abel Kiviat of the Irish-American A. C. Saturday night in the one mile event at the Columbia University games, in which he made a new indoor record at the distance, and summarily disposed of Oscar Hedlund of Boston, who had only three days before hung up a mark of 4.18 4-5, and Norman Taber, the Brown University student, has served to make him a prime favorite for the 600 yards and 1,000 yards championships of the Amateur Athletic Union, to be decided in Madison Square Garden, March 6.

James E. Sullivan, Secretary of the Union, yesterday received the entry of the Winged Fist miler for these events, and it is expected that when Kiviat meets Hedlund, Taber, Meredith, Jones and Sheppard, all of whom have been invited to take part in these races, the fastest contests at the distance ever run indoors will be the outcome, and that the present record, 2:16 1-5, for the 1,000 yards, particularly, will be smashed. Entries for the championships will close Feb. 25, with James E. Sullivan, Chairman of the Championship Committee, 21 Warren Street, New York.

Nye First in Sheridan Run.

Members of a dozen clubs of the district took part in the road run of the Sheridan A. C. through the downtown streets yesterday, with the result that the winner turned up in the person of Harry Nye of the Mohawk A. C. of the Bronx, who did 22:10, and beat the second man, C. Pores of the Sheridan A. C., about twenty-five yards for the premier position. The summary: H. Nye, Mohawk A. C.; C. Pores, Sheridan A. C.; H. Rosofsky, unattached; B. Cooper, Sheridan A. C.; P. Donnelly, Millrose A. A.; A. Knoll, Sheridan A. C.; D. Williams, St. Bartholomew A. C.; W. Larkin, St. Bartholomew A. C.; F. Fleming, Mucellian A. C.; W. Moselek, Glencoe A. C.; J. Kellehir, Mohawk A. C.

CHAMPION KILBANE TO BOX KIRKWOOD

Shugrue and Lore Also on Card —Boxing Programme of Local Clubs.

The all-star show at the Empire A. C. at Manhattan Casino on Wednesday night stands out far superior to anything arranged at the other New York boxing clubs this week, and is in reality one of the best balanced cards that has been put on in this city in many weeks. Johnny Kilbane, the featherweight champion, is one of the headliners on the card, but there are five other boxers of National reputation to add strength to the bill. This will be the first show to be held at the Empire A. C. since the Cross-Rivers bout, which furnished so much comment a month ago. Neither the Garden A. C. nor the Fairmont A. C. will stage any big bouts this week.

Kilbane, in his fifth opportunity to show New York that he possesses real championship calibre, will be pitted against one of the best featherweights in America, George Kirkwood of St. Louis. Kirkwood came to New York unheralded early last year, but he quickly proved himself a high-class boxer, figuring in several star bouts at local clubs before he took a trip across the continent to California. Kilbane proved a big disappointment here in his bouts with Burns, Dundee, O'Keefe, and Driscoll, and he will have to show more than he did in three of these contests to cause Kirkwood much trouble. The latter carries considerable cleverness and punching ability.

The semi-final to this bout will bring together two of the best youngsters that the lightweight division has produced in many months, Joe Shugrue of Jersey City and Johnny Lore of the west side. Shugrue's last bout here resulted in a victory over Leach Cross, and Lore easily defeated One-Round Hogan. Both are strong and fast and should furnish a hard bout. In the opening ten-round encounter Phil Cross will test his aggressiveness against the cleverness of Harry Donahue of Pekin, Ill.

At the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club Thursday night Jack McCarron of Philadelphia will face Young Kurtz of Newark in the ten-round feature bout. In another ten-round bout Harry Ramsey of Philadelphia will oppose Jack Hanlon of Long Island City. Matchmaker Abe Attell is arranging some six-round preliminaries.

At the Olympic A. C. of Harlem to-night Willie Beecher, the east side lightweight, will mix with Bobby Scanlon of Philadelphia in the main event.

The Brooklyn Beach A. C. of South Brooklyn, which has recently been reorganized under new management, will reopen to-morrow with Young Ahearn of Brooklyn and Kid Graves of Wisconsin as the principals in the star bout. In the ten-round semi-final Billy Bennett of Ireland and Soldier Bartfield of Fort Hamilton will do the honors. There will also be a six-round bout and two four-round events.

Amateur boxers will have their inning in a tournament which will be put on at the New York Athletic Club on Wednesday and Friday nights.

The New Polo A. A. will put on its regular show Friday night, and the usual week-end shows will be staged at the Fairmont and Sharkey Clubs.

Joe Hooker Makes Good Start.

Joe Hooker, the son of Billy Joh, the referee, made an impressive debut as a professional pugilist Saturday night at the Fairmont Athletic Club, when he knocked out Sonny Halloran in one round. Hooker, who is in the lightweight division, made an excellent impression and showed the earmarks of becoming a good man. He is the possessor of a pair of good hands, with a stiff punch in each, and, although he lacks science, his work showed he was not entirely deficient in this respect. After sizing up his man Hooker feinted with his right and then sent in a left to the body. Before Halloran recovered Hooker shot over a stiff right on the jaw and ended the bout.

Boxing Bouts for State Legislators.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 16.—Boxing promoters are using every effort to induce the State Legislators to legalize the sport. To that end it is intended to stage a series of bouts Wednesday for the State lawmakers, in order that they may be influenced to vote in favor of the bill, which has been framed after the Frawley Boxing law in New York State.

Honahan Wins at St. Anselm's A. C.

Hugh Honahan, an unattached athlete, was first in the regular weekly road run of the St. Anselm's A. C. over the streets of the Bronx in the biggest field of harriers which has ever started in an event of the club. Honahan's time for the distance, a bit over three miles, was 16:27, with his margin of victory comparatively easy, as Joe McGill of the Putnam A. C. was second, 150 yards back, with his time 17:03. As a preliminary to the road race, Billy Rozette, the winner of the Brooklyn-Sea Gate Marathon, and Harry Jensen, the second man in that event, ran an exhibition mile, to the delight of the crow gathered. The order of finish:

H. Honahan, unattached; J. McGill, Putnam A. C.; J. Flatley, St. Anselm's A. C.; F. Ruggurio, Bronx Church House; M. Pistauch, unattached; H. Darby, St. Anselm's A. C.; V. Volterez, Greek-American A. C.; M. Collins, Union Settlement A. C.; T. McCormack, Xavier A. A.; F. Griswold, Pennant A. C.; P. Reynolds, Xavier A. A.; R. Newpiert, St. Anselm's A. C.; H. S. Kellert, Pennant A. C.; E. Rauk, Holy Cross Lyceum; J. Faley, Xavier A. A.; J. Mitchell, Dominican Lyceum; H. Gilligan, Bronxdale A. C.; T. Spear, Ozanam A. A.; W. Hannon, St. Anselm's A. C.; M. Troshauskly, Y. M. H. A.; E. Kiernan, St. Anselm's A. C.; J. Nolan, Xavier A. A.; A. Canarsie, unattached; E. Kearns, Pennant A. C.; A. Lemberg, Deerfoot A. C.

Frick First in Pennant Run.

Harvey Frick of the Bronx Church House romped home an easy winner yesterday in the weekly run of the Pennant A. C. R. Brandt of St. Anselm's A. C. finished second, closely followed by F. Flesche of the Holy Cross Lyceum. The time of the winner was 21:36, which was good time, considering the muddy condition of the roads. The summary: H. Frick, Bronx Church House; R. Brandt, St. Anselm's A. C.; F. Flesche, Holy Cross Lyceum; R. Sehring, Mott Haven A. C.; F. Hynes, Hudson Guild A. A.; J. A. Erb, Holy Cross Lyceum; I. Feinberg, unattached; W. Boak, unattached; F. Jahn, Holy Cross Lyceum; H. Ernest, unattached; J. Hotz, Pennant A. C.; L. Mackey, St. Anselm's A. C.; W. Flesche, Holy Cross Lyceum; J. Kraus, Astoria P. A. C.; C. Colwell, Pennant A. C.; W. Flekbohm, unattached.

ADD MORE EXHIBITS.

Motor Boat Show at the Garden Now Complete.

Although the Motor Boat Show now in progress in Madison Square Garden was closed to the view of the general public yesterday, there was an unusual amount of activity within the big building. A number of exhibits which were delayed in transportation from various distant points were put in place. A few finishing touches were also made to the decorative idea, and the show which opened on Saturday is now complete in every detail.

Judging by the number of interested visitors to the show on Saturday it seems that motor boating is fast becoming popular with the ladies, many of whom showed keen interest in the different types of sailing craft and asked a number of intelligent questions regarding them. Manufacturers have shown much consideration to the feminine motor boat enthusiast and have catered to her wants in the arrangement of numerous parts on their products. Upholstery, simple lighting systems, self-starters, and a number of other details have been considered in the new models, and motor boating may be indulged in by the fair sex and become just as popular with them as it has steadily grown with mere man in the past.

Much interest is centred in the latest types of speed creations, of which there are many on exhibition. Yachtsmen are especially enthusiastic, and already are predicting great things for some of these speed annihilators this coming season. To regain the British International Trophy, which was won by the British boat Maple Leaf IV. at Huntington last Summer, is the aim of several well-known yachtsmen, who have issued a challenge and built boats to race against last Summer's winner. Some of these boats, said to attain a speed of a mile a minute are on view at the Garden.

The variety of boats, from the twelve-foot tender to the magnificent sixty-foot cruiser, is exceptionally large this year. The exhibitors at the show are many, and a wide field in the motor-boat industry is covered. Besides the comprehensive display of motor boats, there are engines of all types, carburetors, ignition devices, lighting systems, rudders, propellers, wheels, varnishes and paints, life savers, self-starters, lubricants, and a thousand other accessories and parts to be seen on the balconies and in the basement of the building.

TO DECIDE HOCKEY TITLE.

Yale and Harvard Will Play Wednesday at St. Nicholas Rink.

The principal hockey event this week will be the game between Harvard and Yale, which is scheduled for Wednesday evening at the St. Nicholas Rink. This will decide the intercollegiate hockey honors for the season which, until Princeton was beaten so thoroughly by Harvard on Saturday, were believed to rest securely in possession of the Tigers, but the Crimson team which has now disposed of all the others will have its right to the championship disputed until the Yalensians are conquered.

In the Amateur Hockey League, the Hockey Club and St. Nicholas teams are again tied for the lead, which adds considerable interest to the games which these two teams will play to-morrow evening. That the Hockey Club lost the leading place in the race was due to the injuries sustained by Castleman and Britton, which compelled them to retire, but Castleman rejoined the team and played against the Crescent A. C. last week, and Britton will again get into the game this week.

The Crescents and the Irish will play on Friday night, and a splendid game is sure to be the result. The standing of the clubs is as follows:

| | Won. | Lost. | P. C. |
|---|---|---|---|
| St. Nicholas | 3 | 2 | .600 |
| Hockey Club | 3 | 2 | .600 |
| Crescent A. C. | 3 | 3 | .500 |
| Irish-American A. C. | 2 | 4 | .333 |

GOOD SCORES AT TRAPS.

Larchmont Gunners Use 5,000 Clay Birds in Weekly Shoot.

It was a banner day for the trapshooters of the Larchmont Yacht Club yesterday. Sixteen men shot for the prizes offered in nine matches, and under the conditions, which were ideal for the sport, full scores were returned in nearly all of them. In some cases one or two shoot-offs were required to determine the winners. Nearly 5,000 clay birds were used at the two sets of traps in service.

Ralph L. Spotts carried off the honors of the day. He had to fight hard to win the eleventh bar to his string of this season for high gun, but he succeeded by returning a score of 140 out of the possible 150, beating his nearest opponent, D. F. McMahon, by just one "bird." He also won the second take-home trophy with a full score after a shoot-off with A. Whiting, T. Lenane, Jr., and W. E. Ferguson.

There was some close work in the 100-target handicap match in which sixteen competed for the prize, squads of four shooting four strings of 25 targets each. It resulted in a tie between T. J. McCahill and A. Arthur, each having smashed 98 out of the 100. In the second shoot-off Arthur won. T. J. McCahill, A. Arthur, T. Lenane, Jr., and W. E. Ferguson tied with full scores of 25 in the shoot for the Monthly Cup, and in the shoot-off McCahill was declared the winner.

T. Lenane, Jr., proved the winner of the Visitors' Cup, with a full score after a shoot-off, and he also captured the 10-target scratch prize. The 15-target scratch prize went to A. Arthur, and the special trophy prize to A. Whiting, with a full score. A. J. McManus won the Take-Home Trophy with a full score after a shot-off with F. W. Fitzgerald, and the Accumulation Cup went to W. E. Ferguson after a shoot-off with T. J. McCahill, A. Arthur, W. J. Elias, and W. B. Short.

Ski Jumper Clears 169 Feet.

IRONWOOD, Mich., Feb. 16.—Ragmar Omtvet of Chicago, the Norwegian student who came to this country a year ago to compete for the amateur championship in ski jumping, to-day broke the world's record, jumping as a professional. Omtvet cleared 169 feet, beating by 13 feet, the former world's record of 156 feet, made in Norway. Forty other contestants and a large crowd of enthusiasts witnessed the tremendous leap, which was made in the last day of the tournament of the American Ski Association here.

YALE FAVORITE FOR SWIMMING PENNANT

Intercollegiate Championship Titles May Be Decided Friday at New Haven.

The swimming teams of Yale and Princeton will clash Wednesday at New Haven, and the meet should determine the season's fight for intercollegiate championship honors both in swimming and in water polo, for Pennsylvania, Columbia, and C. C. N. Y. have been practically eliminated from the running by the defeats suffered. Only the Tigers and the Elis have clean scores, and it is hardly probable that the winners in Wednesday's contests will be defeated in the concluding events by any of the teams that have proved inferior to one or the other of the leading rivals.

The swimming team pennant is expected to land at New Haven, while Princeton seems strongest at 100 and 220 yards with Capt. Cross, and in the plunge for distance with Thomas Robinson. Yale will probably take the fancy diving with McAleenan and McGregor, the fifty-yard swim with Hoadley or Marr, and the relay race with Howe, Roberts, Hoadley and Marr. As the relay race scores eight points for the winning quartet and none for the losing team, a victory for the Blue is confidently anticipated.

The action of the Princeton Faculty in declaring Harry O'Sullivan ineligible, after deciding the case in his favor a week ago, has caused a good deal of feeling among the New Jersey watermen. They claim that with O'Sullivan they could have easily taken Yale's measure, while his absence may cause them to lose the championship, and though they realize that the home authorities are justified in adhering strictly to rules, they feel keenly the injustice of being deprived of their speediest sprinter because he is a freshman when Yale will pit against them five or six of its first-year men.

The water polo title is conceded by experts to Princeton. The sextet which lowered Columbia's colors last Friday showed both strength and versatility in attack and skill in defense. For the first time in history a college team exhibited well-organized formations and played them by signal. Capt. Wight handled the forwards by giving them the number of the play as soon as the ball was secured, and splendid team work was the result. Yale's men have improved and will put up a hard battle, but they have only a fighting chance at victory.

TERRY LEADS BILLIARDISTS.

Title Tolder of Class C Shows Best Run and Average to Date.

Clyde B. Terry, the present Class C champion, maintains a lead in the matter of high runs and grand average in the tournament for the title which is now being decided at Maurice Daly's Academy and is tied with Philip Wechsler in games won at two apiece. Terry has been playing the sort of billiards which will, in the event of his being successful in the series, continue him in the class, as his grand average to date is a shade inside 4½.

Irving J. Lewine, who is tied in games won with C. B. Lewis at one each, has made the best individual average to date with 5 5-19, but his defeat by the last-named player gave him quite a setback. C. P. Matthews and W. W. Harris, the others in the round robin, have both been defeated in both their matches.

To-night's matches will bring together Terry and Lewis, Matthews and Lewine, and Wechsler and Harris. The standing of the men, with their best runs and grand averages, follows:

STANDING AND GRAND AVERAGES.

| | W. | L. | H. R. | Gr. Av. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| C. B. Terry | 2 | 0 | 45 | 4 44-89 |
| Philip Wechsler | 2 | 0 | 35 | 3 70-110 |
| C. B. Lewis | 1 | 1 | 20 | 3 64-94 |
| I. J. Lewine | 1 | 1 | 27 | 2 87-93 |
| C. P. Matthews | 0 | 2 | 18 | 2 91-97 |
| W. W. Harris | 0 | 2 | 19 | 2 87-100 |

Amateur Billiard Tournament.

The second week's play in the amateur three-cushion tournament at Doyle's Academy finds W. Thompson (28,) N. Collins (22,) and G. Avery (20,) leading their respective sections, none of them as yet having lost a game. The sectional tournaments will be finished this week. The finals will start March 3, as next week the academy will be in use for the De Oro-Hueston pocket billiard championship.

Alfred De Oro and Thomas Hueston will be busy this week playing the best amateurs in town at Doyle's Forty-second Street Academy. These matches will prove good training for the men, as they are to meet next week in a 600-ball championship match. To-morrow afternoon Hueston will play Harold MacGrath, the novelist, and at night De Oro will meet William A. Tilt, a local amateur.

Harlem Navy Hand Ball.

In a one-sided series of games on the Metropolitan handball court yesterday, Lone Star dropped six games to the home team. This practically puts the Lone Star team out of the running, although it had been well up among the leaders since the tournament began. Hudson played Union on the latter's court and failed to land a game. Nonpareil engaged with Nassau on the Nonpareil court in the fastest set of games of the day. Nassau won four of the six. The scores:

Hudson—G. Hessler and De Witt, 11—11; G. Kunz, Jr., and Cunneen, 2—4; Kurtz and Lee, 14—14.

Union—Ryan and Berry, 21—21; Lyons and Kirby, 21—21; Britz and Hayden, 21—21.

Lone Star—J. Lilienthal and Lichtenstadter, 11—12; Abowich and Schwab, 15—17; Peyser and Seixas, 12—6.

Metropolitan—Walsh and Weston, 21—21; Metz and Hyland, 21—21; Murphy and Hines, 21—21.

Nassau—Stivers and Borchers, 21—21; Holmes and Engel, 21—21; Kohler and Conkling, 20—9.

Nonpareil—Schwartz and Palmer, 17—20; Pacini and Utley, 10—16; Kennaugh and Coughlin, 21—21.

STANDING OF THE CLUBS.

| | W. | L. | | W. | L. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Union | 35 | 7 | Nonpareil | 14 | 28 |
| Metropolitan | 33 | 9 | Nassau | 10 | 32 |

Irish-American Athlete Wins.

In the weekly road run of the Paulist A. C., held yesterday from the clubhouse in West Sixty-first Street and over the four and a half mile course, H. Jacobson of the Irish-American A. C. was first in the good time of 24:05. P. Dunne of the home club made the pace for the greater part of the distance, but was unable to withstand the sprint of the wearer of the Winged Fist in the last half mile, being beaten by thirty yards, and closely pressed by the third and fourth men, S. D. Richman and J. Logue. The summary: H. Jacobson, Irish-American A. C.; P. Dunne, Paulist A. C.; S. D. Richman, unattached; J. Logue, Paulist A. C.; F. O'Brien, St. Vincent Ferrer; J. A. Hughes, Ozanam Association; W. Thompson, St. Vincent Ferrer; W. Bernhardt, unattached; R. A. Long, N. Y. P. L.; E. Furrey, Paulist A. C.

CHANGE DOG SHOW METHODS

Want Judges and Handlers Licensed —L. I. Club Dinner.

Several proposed amendments to the present standing rules of the American Kennel Club were discussed Saturday night by the members of the Long Island Kennel Club when they assembled at the Hoffman House at their twelfth annual dinner. A. P. Vredenburgh, secretary of the American Kennel Club, acted as toastmaster, and the dinner and speeches following kept the diners until nearly midnight.

The amendments, which have been drawn up and which it is expected will be presented to the American Kennel Club this week for action, were drawn to the attention of the members of the Long Island Association by Secretary Vredenburgh in his speech, which opened that part of the evening's programme. The amendments in general tend to throw sharper restrictions about the dog shows and the manner in which they are managed, and also to secure more suitable judges and professional handlers than are at present selected.

It was proposed to license judges and professional handlers. At present, according to Secretary Vredenburgh, neither the judges nor the professional handlers are licensed. One of the objections that Mr. Vredenburgh seemed to find in the present system in regard to the judges is that many are allowed to officiate who know little or nothing about dogs. In other words, he said in his speech, the judges in general do not take their tasks very seriously. The test required for a license it is thought would eliminate such judges.

Another defect which the proposed amendments aim to correct is in the lack of trained and capable professional handlers. For such men, who play an important role during the shows, the requirements would be equally strict for a license.

It was also proposed that trophies for unclassified specials be abolished. This is to check the present competition of one breed of dog against another, which the owners of the dogs think in the long run has many detrimental results. It is felt that the show should be educational in its aims, and not strive for the spectacular.

This is the first time in the history of the Long Island Kennel Club that the association has held its dinner in Manhattan instead of in Brooklyn. The Dinner Committee was composed of John F. Collins, A. A. Rost, and Alva B. Rosenberg, with Dr. E. J. De Mund, President of the club, as member ex-officio. A dog show had been originally planned for the last night at the Gregorian Hotel, but with the decision to have their dinner last night, the show was postponed until next month.

Among those present at the dinner were:

Captain Vredenburgh, Dr. J. E. De Mund, Mr. C. A. Kelly, Dr. E. H. Berendsohn, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Collins, F. P. Thomason, H. Warren Beals, Francis P. Trownx, Mr. and Mrs. A. Gillette, Mr. and Mrs. Allison M. Lederler, Mr. and Mrs. A. Herzfeld, Thomas Grisdale, Miss I. Wareham, J. Ferond, George Ronsee, Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Hann, A. McClure Holley, S. Menendez, A. A. Rost, Alva B. Rosenberg, William Bruggemann, D. A. Batson, Miss Vera Freystadt, Mr. and Mrs. Carreno, Mr. and Mrs. Chadjurian, Mrs. Cedar, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Pell, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Champion, Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Ritchy, V. P. Bruge, R. Batson, T. Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. T. Drew, Mrs. Carlin, Mrs. M. Thorpe, Walter Murray, James Conway, and L. Gluch.

POOR ICE FOR YACHTS.

Four Boats Compete for Trophy on Shrewsbury River.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Ftb. 16.—Four yachts of the independent ice yachts sailed a race this morning over a five-mile triangle in front of the clubhouse on the North Shrewsbury River. The time was slow, owing to the soft ice and a light southwest wind. The trophy sailed for was the club challenge pennant, and the following yachts competed: Everett Asay's Streak, Ralph Sickles's P D Q, Harry Asay's Reindeer, and Delford Fisher's N R S. They were bunched on the start, but the Streak got a slant of the wind and drew away from the other crafts. The Reindeer obtained second place. The P D Q and the N R S remained in the order named. These positions were not changed until on the last four rounds, when the P D Q went to the front, passing the Reindeer, and won the race by 5 minutes and one-half second. Her time was 9 minutes 14 seconds. Streak finished far ahead of the N R S.

Several hundred skaters, among them being several sail skaters from New York, were on the Shrewsbury River here to-day. An unfinished race for the challenge pennant of the North and South Shrewsbury Rivers is called for to-morrow. The South Shrewsbury Ice Yacht Club won one of a series of three races last Winter, when the ice disappeared. The starters will be X L N C and Ugenee of Long Branch and the Daisy and Tyro of the defenders of North Shrewsbury Ice Yacht Club of this city.

Hungarians Defeat Greeks.

At Van Cortlandt Park yesterday the soccer team of the Hungarian F. C. defeated the Greek F. C. eleven by a score of 3 goals to 0 after two well contested periods, in which Hager proved to be the star of the match, during which he tallied two of the three goals. Behr scored the other count from a penalty kick.

AUTO RACES AT BRIGHTON.

Western Association to Invade Metropolis May 30 and 31.

Announcement was made last night to the effect that the Brighton Beach race track had been leased for May 30 and 31, and on those dates an automobile meet would be built around a match race between Oldfield and "Teddy" Tetzlaff of Los Angeles, holder of the world's road race record.

It was stated that the meet would be held under the sanction of the Western Automobile Association, and that at least ten drivers and cars would be brought here from California to participate in the events. Oldfield will drive his 300 horse power Christie, and Tetzlaff will have both the famous Fiat Cyclone and the 120 Fiat with which he defeated Bragg, Bruce-Brown and other noted drivers in the Santa Monica race on May 6 last.

May Handicap Cornell Crew.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 16.—Charles E. Courtney, coach of the Cornell Navy, feared to-day that the construction work on the barge canal terminal in the Cayuga Inlet in this city will handicap the Cornell crews this Spring. He said he feared that the contractors would not have the excavation in the inlet finished in time to permit the launching of shells from the Cornell boat house, and that, therefore, it would be necessary for him to move crew practice down to Glenwood, three miles north of this city, and have the whole squad go down there every day. This would not only cause the loss of a lot of time but it would require the cutting down of the rowing squad much earlier than usual, because all of the men could not be accommodated at Glenwood. Cornell crew practice will begin this week.

MR. DE LA BARRA'S MESSAGE.

Mr. DE LA BARRA's conviction, expressed in his cable dispatch to THE TIMES this morning, that the Mexican people in the present deplorable crisis will work in harmony for the swift reestablishment of peace, is highly creditable to his patriotism, and it is gratifying to receive such a message from a man so high in the esteem of all intelligent Mexicans, even after six days of disastrous artillery fire in the streets of the capital, with no clear prospect of a cessation of hostilities.

In the trying period between the withdrawal from Mexico of Gen. PORFIRIO DIAZ and the inauguration of MADERO, Mr. DE LA BARRA held the reins of Government with commendable firmness. He was unable, with his defective military forces, to check revolution entirely. ZAPATA was then defying law and decency in the States nearest to the Federal District, as he is now, and MADERO, who though not in office was supposably the strongest man in Mexico, was held by many well-informed persons to be chiefly responsible for the failure to suppress this outlawry. If ZAPATA had been quickly conquered there might have been no Orozco rebellion to harass the Madero administration from its very beginning. But nobody familiar with the recent history of Mexico holds Mr. DE LA BARRA responsible for the continuance of lawlessness. He preserved order in the capital, he manfully refused all offers of personal advancement, and was able to hand over the Government to his elected successor with the Treasury in a fair state.

Whether or not he has the force of character and the commanding qualities which would enable him now to take up the Presidential office, after the havoc wrought by nearly two years of weak government and widespread turmoil, it is impossible to say. But he is assuredly the man of the hour in Mexico. There is nobody else now clearly in sight who is nearly so fit to take up the task.

PEACE PROSPECTS.

"It would be a great loss to me if I could not be present. It would be almost a duty for a Democratic President to take part in such exercises." This is the message of WOODROW WILSON to the American Peace Society, of which he is the Honorary President, apropos of the Third Peace Congress, to be held in St. Louis May 1 to 3. Plainly Mr. WILSON has the courage of his convictions. In a few weeks, when he will take office as Chief Executive of the United States and Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, he may face as difficult and momentous a decision as to peace and war as has ever fallen to any President save LINCOLN. The faithful and gallant gentleman who must stand guard until then is using every effort to avoid a crisis, and he is receiving the loyal support of statesmen of both parties and of the press throughout the country. Mr. WILSON's message to the Peace Society is an indication, hardly needed, but welcome, that he will assume his great office with the same spirit that has animated his predecessor. It is a good omen.

There will be found some critics, doubtless, to call attention to the discouraging situation in which the work of the advocates for peace will probably be done in May. Desperate civil strife in Mexico, with possible complications of incalculable scope for the United States; the fierce war in the Balkan Peninsula; the peril of discord between the great Powers, whose mighty armaments impose on Europe a burden equivalent to that of actual war in the past; and the readjustment demanded in the Orient by the bloody revolution in China—there is in these conditions little to cheer those engaged in advocating peace. But a more searching inquiry reveals some brighter elements. So far the Government and the people of the United States have met the Mexican problem with a firm and honorable determination to avoid the use of force if possible, and with an entire freedom from any arrogant or provocative spirit.

In Europe it is extremely significant and hopeful that the vast armaments have not [illegible] during all the great changes in the Near East, and that the renewal of war, recognized as involving the very existence of Turkey, finds the Powers apparently more united in preserving peace among themselves than ever. The direct appeal of the old Emperor of Austria to the Czar of Russia, officially proclaimed as a successful effort to reach an understanding, is, on its face, an extraordinary proof of the desire of the two Governments to avoid a clash. The discussion of even the possibility of an agreement between Germany and Great Britain on the long-standing and vexatious question of naval expansion is proof of a like desire on their part. A year ago it was generally believed in all the capitals of Europe, on the one hand, that the first serious conflict in the Balkans would be the signal for a general war, and, on the other, that, soon or late, a struggle between Great Britain and Germany was inevitable, and more probably sooner than later. The interval has seen a very serious conflict in the Balkans, and has also seen Germany and Great Britain working patiently, firmly, and in good faith to preserve general European peace. Clearly the situation is not desperate and not so incongruous with the work of a Peace Congress as, on the surface, it seems.

UNFORTUNATE.

It is reported that Prosecuting Attorney WHITMAN is annoyed by the conduct of some of the police authorities toward his efforts to bring members of the police force to justice and, if possible, to break up the atrocious system of corruption, as to the existence of which there is no doubt. It is not necessary to go into the details of the occurrences that disturb the Prosecuting Attorney. They have been described in the press from day to day, and must be better known at Headquarters than they are to the public.

Meanwhile the Commissioner of Police is on record as professing a desire not only not to interfere, but to aid in every way he can the work of Mr. WHITMAN. We do not wish to question the sincerity of this desire on Mr. WALDO's part, but we venture to suggest that the constant occurrence of these incidents shows, on the one hand, that his feeling is not shared by his subordinates, and, on the other hand, that he is apparently unable to control the conduct of these subordinates. This is peculiarly unfortunate, because from the start of Mr. WHITMAN's campaign against corrupt and lawless policemen, the Police Commissioner has failed publicly to take the right view of the morale of the police. He has shown much more solicitude that the decent policemen shall not be underestimated than that the force should be purged.

The only right way to protect the reputation of the force is to clean it up by jailing the thieves and executing the murderers. That process is not promoted by the interference of police officials with the work of the District Attorney. If Mr. WALDO cannot stop such interference, he should explain to the community why.

THE WAGNER REPORT.

After nearly two years of close work the report of the State Factory Investigation Commission is now before the Legislature and the public. It deserves the careful consideration of both. The commission is a fair one. Senator WAGNER is its Chairman. Among its members are, Mr. GOMPERS of the Federation of Labor, Miss MARY E. DREIER, President of the Women's Trade Union League, and Mr. R. E. DOWLING, builder and realty expert. Its counsel is ABRAM I. ELKUS of this city. Its authority might have been enhanced by the presence of a representative of the manufacturing interests, many of this class being strongly in favor of removing and preventing abuses and capable of aiding greatly in devising means to that end. But we repeat that the report deserves careful attention.

The commission has found very bad conditions in many directions. The reckless exposure of life to destruction by fire is one of the worst. The neglect and worse that caused the awful loss in the Triangle factory fire still exists in many cases. The chief recommendation of the commission in this connection is that the number of persons employed in a factory exposed to fire be limited by law to the capacity of the stairways. This has the merit of working automatically, though real safety would necessarily be affected by the nature of construction, sprinklers and like devices. In regard to labor, especially the labor of women and children, and in industries where the workers are foreigners, very bad abuses are reported. This is also true in some industries using materials and machinery dangerous to health and life, and is emphatically true in regard to a considerable portion of the baking establishments. Touching sanitation, the commission says:

> A survey of the general sanitary conditions of factories throughout the State shows that one-half of these are fairly beyond criticism, their defects being such as may be easily remedied. Some are all that could be desired. The other half are in need of a thorough reform, especially in the matter of clean workrooms, light and ventilation, washing facilities, dressing rooms for women, and sanitary toilet places. With regard to these latter a good deal must be done in the interests of cleanliness and also of decency where men and women are employed together.

The most important recommendation of the commission is the creation of an "Industrial Board," whose regulations should have the force of law.

There is much to be said in favor of this plan. It has been applied to public service corporations, on the whole, with good results. But it is, of course, exposed to serious abuse. Everything depends upon the care and honesty with which a board of this sort is selected. The chief defect in the plan is that it is not easy to get real responsibility in a board, and, without that, inefficiency, favoritism and, still more, demagogy, may creep in. The recent experience of this city in connection with the Public Service Commission, the great doubt that prevailed for some time as to the influences that would prevail with the Governor, the possibilities of the invasion of the commission by politics, will not soon be forgotten. On the other hand, the experiments with commissions of the sort proposed here, in other States and particularly in Wisconsin and Massachusetts, show that good results can be had. It is largely a question of attentive and intelligent public opinion. The use of the police power of the State to protect health and life in industries involving risks of these is a principle no longer open to doubt. A joint meeting of the Senate and Assembly committees on labor and industries will be held on Wednesday to consider bills embodying the suggestions of Senator WAGNER's committee.

GENOVEVO DE LA O & CO.

The Indian bandit and revolutionary known as GENOVEVO DE LA O, who has been offering assistance to FELIX DIAZ in the City of Mexico, has been at odds with his former chief, EMILIANO ZAPATA, because that outlaw has been considering terms of peace with MADERO, who might, indeed, have put him out of the outlawry business two years ago. ZAPATA, it seems, had promised to compel DE LA O to lay down his arms. Hence, perhaps, the appearance of that warrior as a possible adherent of DIAZ.

Mr. DE LA O has the oddest and most picturesque name of all the armed leaders in Mexico who claim the right to rule their fellow-men. But some of the others have names of romantic flavor, too. There are, for instance, PASCUAL OROZCO, SALAZAR, and CHECHE CAMPOS in Chihuahua; GANDENCIO DE LA LLHAVE in Puebla, HIGINIO AGUILAR in Vera Cruz, and FELIPE NERI, whose name perhaps suggests sainthood rather than romance, in Morelos. Not so strikingly named, but quite as effective with rifle, revolver, and machete are BENJAMIN ARGUMENDO of Durango, AGUSTIN DE POZO, who claims rulership in Pubela; ABRAHAM LUCAS, also of that State; the renowned ZAPATA and his brother, and their associates in politics and throatcutting, SAMANO and ANTONIO LIMON. Yet we have not named a third of the men who must be reckoned with in any movement to restore order and a just enforcement of the laws in our stricken sister republic.

UNFAIR TAXATION.

An Assemblyman from Onondaga County proposes to increase the revenues of the State by a stamp tax of 2 per cent. on all theatre tickets. His bill provides for the printing of the price on every ticket sold. The box office prices of the tickets are generally printed on them now, but Mr. DALEY probably does not know that many, if not most, of the theatre tickets sold in this city are sold at an advance price by the agencies. The stamps would be affixed either by the agent or the manager.

Generally speaking, the tax on an orchestra seat would be either 4 or 5 cents; sometimes it would be 6. This would be taxing either the managers or the purchasers of tickets a trifle too high. It is not fair taxation. The idea of getting so much money by means seemingly so simple is doubtless fascinating to persons unfamiliar with the principles of taxation, but there is no likelihood that Mr. DALEY's bill will become a law.

MEMORIAL BEACONS AT PANAMA.

GUSTAVE EIFFEL, who designed the tower for the Paris Exposition, will be interested in the proposal of a competition among the world's architects, made in the letter to THE TIMES from ALEXANDER KONTA appearing Feb. 14, for designs of two memorials to be set at its entrances in honor of the completion of the Panama Canal. They should be "memorials surpassing in artistic conception the Statue of Liberty that will serve a practical purpose as well." The Regents of the Smithsonian Institution have just voted a Langley medal to Mr. EIFFEL "for his researches relating to the resistance of the air in connection with aviation." Aeroplane stations might be perched on the colossal beacon towers, and they could be fitted with radiotelegraphic apparatus to send signals across the Atlantic and the Pacific. Not Mr. EIFFEL alone, but many architects abroad and at home—particularly the designers of our mighty skyscrapers—would enter keenly into this competition that would assure to the winner imperishable fame.

This is an idea big enough for the Federal Government to consider. Its proponent suggests the co-operation of the State Department, of Ministries of the Fine Arts abroad, and of the staff of the Peace Palace at The Hague, who might receive the documents accompanying the competing drawings and models submitted by foreign artists. It is not too early to perfect plans for such a competition, so that the memorials of a unique event [illegible] history may be placed at the time [illegible] celebration.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Receivers May Be Banished. Full and exact knowledge of the new loud-talking telephone exhibited in action last week to the alumni of Stevens Institute is as yet confined within such narrow circles that prophecy concerning its capacities and possibilities would be rash. The telephone, however, of all the inventions of the last century, is perhaps the one which, with the doubtful exception of the steam railway, most changed and facilitated the daily activities of the greatest number of people, and any real and essential improvement in it would therefore be a matter of the utmost importance.

Whether or not to make the messages sent by telephone distinctly audible at a considerable distance and without the aid of a "receiver" placed closed to the ear would be altogether a change for the better is questionable. In some circumstances—indeed, in many easily conceivable—this would be an obvious advantage. At present telephonic sounds are so near the lower limitation of our power to hear that to hear them at all often requires conditions more favorable than can be conveniently obtained. Not infrequently the limit is passed, especially for words that are not made comprehensible by what in written records is called the context. As it is usually just these words that are the vital part of the message, mistakes and misunderstandings from this cause are numerous, with results always irritating and sometimes serious.

In all such cases a loud-talking telephone would be welcome, especially if the volume of sound could be regulated to suit the exigencies of a varying environment, and that would be a simple problem. On the other hand, it is one of the weaknesses of the present telephone that the sender of a message, except when he imprisons himself in a sound-proof—and air-tight—booth, can be overheard by everybody anywhere near him, sometimes to their delight, but more often to their annoyance. Troubles of this sort would be doubled, at least, if both sides of the telephonic conversation were as widely audible as one side is now. So the promised "revolution" of telephony will be awaited with mingled emotions of hope and dread. In that respect, however, it does not differ from other revolutions, and the familiar characteristic ought not to be very alarming.

Illiterates May Be Intelligent. In his letter to President TAFT on the Immigration bill, Secretary NAGEL might have brought out more clearly and with more emphasis than he did the fact that literacy, in itself, is no better as a test of intelligence than it is of morality. Just as many vicious immigrants can read fluently in one, or even in several languages, while to many who are without a trace of criminal tendency the whole world of print is silent, so inability to read any language at all may prove imbecility in one man, while in another it may show merely that he never had a chance to go to school.

In other words, to draw any sound conclusion as to mentality from literacy or illiteracy one must know whence the subject of inquiry came. If native of a country where educational facilities are cheap or free, the illiterate must have something very seriously the matter with his brain and his stern exclusion from any land already quite sufficiently supplied with defectives would be fully justified. A second illiterate, if from a country ill provided or unprovided with schools for the particular class to which he belonged, might be of high natural intelligence and quite capable not only of learning to read but of becoming a good citizen.

It should be remembered that literacy was the exception and illiteracy the rule in even the most civilized countries not so many years ago, and that until quite recently, as history goes, the "clerk" was viewed as something of a weakling, at most little more than a useful servant of the men who had both the inclination and the ability to do what, not without excuse, were considered far more important things than reading and writing. Kings, statesmen, and soldiers were not exactly proud of their illiteracy, but they were far from being ashamed of it—as far, indeed, as they were from being unintelligent or inefficient.

Times have changed, of course, and illiteracy now means more than formerly, but it should still be viewed relatively, not in the absolute. Illiterate immigrants are not the best we get, probably; also, they are not the worst. As it happens, they are willing to perform certain highly necessary tasks which literates will undertake only under harshest compulsion. If it were not for a steady inflow of these humbler ones we should hear more than we do of the unpleasant talk about education not being for all. It is foolish talk, as well as unpleasant, but there is an element of truth in it—or would be if books were the only, instead of the most convenient, means of acquiring mental training.

Heroism Has Its Rewards. Now as always, after the return of a polar expedition with its narratives of suffering and death, there are people who ask if the results are worth the cost and a few enter more or less vehement denials. These, however, are but few voices and faint; the great majority of us thrill in prompt response to these displays of culminating courage and endurance, and intuitively know, though we may have some difficulty in explaining, why the explorer who overcomes tremendous difficulties is a hero and has his adequate reward, even when he has only succeeded in reaching the place where, of all others on earth, least reason for remaining exists.

The capacity for feeling keen pleasure in being the first or among a chosen few, anywhere, is too nearly a common human characteristic to be treated lightly as the product of a vain and empty ambition, and those who see in the records of arctic exploration only a waste of energy are neither as wise nor as practical as they imagine themselves to be. Scientists are unanimous in confessing themselves deeply indebted to those who have felt the mysterious call of the North, and though they are not, as scientists, particularly interested in the attainment of the exact mathematical point on the terrestrial sphere where the meridians come together, they value highly the information which the pole hunter incidentally acquires and brings back with him.

Compulsory Oaths.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Many lovers of liberty will, I believe, unite with me in regretting the tendency which is arising to impose compulsory and unnecessary oaths on the students of our educational institutions.

Such oaths have many dangers. They tend to detract from our sense of the solemnity of an oath, which, if taken at all, should be sincere and from the heart, and forever binding on honor and conscience. We are too ready now to think that words can take the place of deeds, and that laws written on the statute books are as effective as laws written on the heart.

Compulsory oaths can too easily be made instruments of injustice and oppression. The great struggle of the English people for freedom of conscience and education included a struggle to be free from compulsory oaths, and the student of history should know how hardly that freedom was won. R. N. T.

INSURING ONE'S OWN.

Subway Contractor Upon an Important Phase of Employers' Liability.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As one of the subway contractors in New York City who is carrying his own insurance—that is, dealing directly with his employes when injury is received on the work—I am deeply interested in the industrial compensation laws which were so ably discussed in your columns to-day. This feature, however, of "self-insurance" is not touched upon in your editorial nor in Mr. Emmet's letter, although it is a very important phase from the contractor's point of view. As I understand the Foley law, this feature of self-insurance is not provided for, and in the opinion of many contractors this is a grave error.

A good organization is the basis of success in a contracting firm, as it is in any other form of industry, and the basis of a good organization lies in the willingness of one's labor to perform a good day's work for a good day's pay. The contractor endeavors to assemble about him a willing, hard-working body of men, one that will stay with him because they are satisfied with their job, will follow him from one contract to another, year after year, always available to form the skeleton of the organization on a new contract and to set the standard of "willingness to work" on the new job.

Loyalty on the part of one's workmen can only be secured by a recognition on their part that they are getting a square deal, and nowhere is this more important than in relation to compensation for injuries received in the performance of their work. If the workingman knows that when he is hurt he is going to be well taken care of by a good physician, who will look after him even after he has been sent to a hospital, that he will be properly compensated for lost time while he is laid up, that his family will be taken care of, if necessary, during this period, that he will be given an easy job until he is strong enough to go back to work, and that his old job is waiting for him when he does get well—that man is pretty apt to be loyal to his employer and so a mutuality of interest is established which is hard to bring about in any other way. Through personal contact mutual confidence is established, a thing essential to a good organization.

For these reasons many contractors always insure themselves and so avoid the introduction of a third party, the stock insurance company, between the employer and employe, and consider the establishment of such friendly relations good practice. When "self-insurance" is properly and conscientiously carried out the employe is more fully, promptly and satisfactorily compensated than by any other method of insurance. It should therefore not be ignored but very seriously considered in the discussion of the present compensation legislation.

MEANINGLESS ETIQUETTE.

Should a Man Raise His Hat While Riding in Elevators?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Glory be to the man who speaks out for man's right to wear his hat in elevators. If a man has a right to wear his hat in any hallway, lobby, office, or other landing place of an elevator he has a right to wear it in that elevator, all female opinion to the contrary notwithstanding. In elevators not of this class he should remove his hat, or rather he should not have it on his head when he gets into the elevator.

A little incident somewhat illustrative came under my notice in the elevator of the Carnegie Building, Fifty-seventh Street, yesterday. I was waiting to go down from an upper floor, and when the car arrived it contained two passengers, a man and a woman of the good clothes class, and the man had his hat on. From that I concluded the man was the woman's husband. Be that as it may, when he saw me he yanked his lid off suddenly, even before the car stopped. When I entered I removed mine, although as a rule I keep it on in such elevators, but I wanted him to see I could be as polite to his wife as he was, and didn't have to be, either, merely for look's sake. Which may be taken as an indication that such politeness is compulsory, and sensible women prefer not to have that kind when hat manners in elevators is merely form, meaning nothing.

Etiquette without a basis of reason is a relic of barbarism, an overhang from the days of tyrants, when all hats came off, not through innate politeness, but to preserve the heads on which to wear the hats when the tyrant wasn't around. W. J. L.

COMMUTERS UPBRAIDED

For Taking Little Interest in Local Affairs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Of a truth, the commuter in these days is catching it on all sides. His monthly fare is increased the while he is relegated to the subcellars of the new stations, whence he is permitted to climb fearsome stairways and "rampes." Then on his return home he learns that he is a blight on the community where he lives because of his lack of interest in local affairs.

There is an element of truth in the indictment, for the withdrawal each day of a good part of the male population certainly works against the creation of public sentiment in favor of worthy local objects. Yonkers suffers rather severely in this way, for it is a large city, with its full share of urban problems, to whose solution it brings but little local pride or public opinion.

Just now we are trying to regulate our public or commercial dance halls. Several of them are conducted in close association with saloons, with results, both moral and physical, which may be imagined. An ordinance is now before the Common Council which, if enacted, will be a long step in the right direction. But, as always, there is the small group of men with political connections which knows exactly what it wants, which in this case is inaction, and while a larger group may make earnest efforts to remedy the evil, the vast majority of our people are inert and indifferent.

In the last class must be included, alas, too many of the commuters. An interior city of our size would have a large number of citizens with exclusively local interests and with sufficient local pride and knowledge of conditions to work out their civic salvation. About all we commuters know is the shortest roads to our homes.

Perhaps shooting would be too good for us. COMMUTER.

HIGH SCHOOL "DEFECTIVES."

Attributed to Laxness of Principals and Superintendents.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The "eternal verities of education" are more or less in a state of flux of late. If some reports are trustworthy, pupils of a very defective kind are to be found in high schools. (I mean "defectives" as the term is used in school literature,) who must in each case have been "approved" by a district Superintendent on the recommendation of a Principal when those officials filled out in duplicate the "estimate of pupil's attainments." The two titles given are printed with small letters throughout the reports—maybe with reason.

It is said in the latest report of the Superintendent that truancy is much more prevalent among Italian pupils than among any others. Judging from the criticisms made by the various experts of the Board of Estimate's Investigating Committee, our youthful Italian population displayed rare good sense in balking at the feast so lavishly spread before them. Maybe the naughty little rogues will attend more regularly, now that there is a prospect of their being educated rather than merely stuffed with impossible quantities of learning—God save the mark! And on all the educational feats now so roundly denounced, Principals (and by necessary implication Superintendents, too,) reported favorably so as to win favor. —See Page 251, Eleventh Report. G.

SCOTT DIED IN VAIN?

The Scientific American's Editor Appraises the Hero's Work.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter to THE TIMES on the futility of antarctic exploration signed "Cui Bono," must have been penned in a mediaeval frame of mind. In this alleged twentieth century there should be no need of pointing out the benefits that mankind will derive as a result of Capt. Scott's noble self-sacrifice.

"Cui Bono," like many another, cherishes the illusion that the planting of a flag at either extremity of the earth is the sole object of the polar explorer. If that were true, not a penny would be forthcoming from scientific societies for the fitting out of expeditions at an expense that ranges from $100,000 to $350,000. There is far more in polar exploration than the mere athletic feat of dashing to a pole and burying in a cairn an American or Norwegian flag together with politely worded documents.

The meteorological observations alone amply repay all the hardships that must be endured. For a knowledge of antarctic blizzards, of atmospheric temperatures at great heights, (determined by balloons,) of barometric pressures, of wind velocities, of hygroscopic conditions, is absolutely indispensable in building up a science of weather forecasting, which will be of inestimable benefit to mankind. Long-range weather prediction is still to be attained. When the meteorologist can actually tell us what will be the state of the weather a week hence, so that every farmer can prepare himself, it will be found that the scientifically trained men who braved the icy blasts of the arctic and antarctic regions, who lived on oily seal meat for months, who even endured scurvy, contributed their share in placing the science of meteorology on this exact basis.

Geology, too, has profited by the researches of the polar explorer. The handful of rocks and fossils brought back by Scott, Shackleton, and Amundsen will enable scientific men to determine once and for all what was the physical relation that once existed between the antarctic continent and South America on the one hand and Austarlia on the other hand. Not only do these new facts enrich our knowledge of the polar regions themselves, but they throw a flood of light upon the geological origin of mountain ranges in other parts of the earth. The value of such information cannot be expressed in dollars and cents at the present time; but generations hence it will be found to dovetail with some other scrap of information that will enable us to make the utmost economic use of a given geological formation. Who can doubt, for example, that the perilous ascent of Mt. Erebus, accomplished during Shackleton's memorable expedition, and the determination that the peak is an active crater has enriched the science of seismology? And who can doubt that this discovery, insignificant though it may seem to the lay mind, brings us just a little step nearer to the day when earthquake prediction will be as firmly established as long-range weather forecasting?

Thus the benefits to be derived from arctic and antarctic exploration could be dilated upon at great length. The magnetic observations, above all the fixation of the magnetic poles of the earth, are of incalculable value. These supplement the studies in terrestrial magnetism made at great expense by scientific institutions and are of direct benefit to the navigator, for the variations in compasses could not be scientifically accounted for and corrected without knowing how the needle conducts itself in all parts of the earth. A study of the polar currents also means much to shipping. We know practically nothing of the origin of the Labrador Current, for example, and still less of the currents that stream up from the south. When a few more Scotts and Pearys have spent years in dropping thermometers into the icy depths of polar seas, when Amundsen completes his proposed five-year drift through the Arctic Ocean we will know much more, and navigation will be safer in consequence. Evidently "Cui Bono" has forgotten that the Titanic was sunk by collision with an iceberg that drifted down from the north.

Scientific polar explorers are as fond of life as bankers and merchants. They make no needless sacrifices. Indeed, to do so would be highly unscientific. But because there is no gold to be sought in the ice packs of the arctic or the Great Barrier of the antarctic, because there is little that allures the daredevil adventurer who craves excitement, because no material benefit is to be derived from living in an igloo and reading "David Copperfield" by the sooty light of a seal blubber lamp, as Lieut. Campbell and his party did for months, we must not rashly conclude that Scott and his men gave up their lives needlessly.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

Increased 144 Per Cent. Last Year Over Previous Average.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Journal of the Automobile Club of America, in order to show that automobiles are less dangerous in street traffic than either wagons or trolley cars, recently published a tabulated list of accidents in Greater New York prepared by Frederick L. Hoffman, statistician of the American Museum of Safety.

These figures are substantially correct, as far as they go, but they do not go far enough to give a definite idea of the present situation. They are for the five years from 1907 to 1911 inclusive, and show as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Killed by automobiles | 456 |
| Killed by trolleys | 977 |
| Killed by wagons | 1,147 |

This gives a yearly average for the five-year period as follows: Automobiles, 91; trolleys, 195; and wagons, 230.

For the year 1912 the figures, as published by the National Highways Protective Society, show that automobiles killed 221; trolleys, 134, and wagons, 177. That is to say, last year automobile fatalities showed an increase of 144 per cent. over the annual average of the preceding five years, while trolleys and wagons showed a decrease of 31 per cent. and 23 per cent., respectively—or, in tabulated form:

| Annual average | 1906-11. | 1912. | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Automobiles | 91 | 221 | 144% Increase |
| Trolleys | 195 | 134 | 31% Decrease |
| Wagons | 230 | 177 | 23% Decrease |

The decrease in trolley and wagon accidents is probably partly due to improved equipment of the former and the partial replacement of the latter by motor vehicles. The increase in the number of automobiles used accounts in part for the increase in accidents due to them; this increase is probably not over 100 per cent., whereas fatal accidents have increased 144 per cent.

Finally, in 1912 for the first time automobiles showed more killings than either trolleys or wagons. E. C.

BUSY WEEK FOR WILSON.

Anti-Trust Bills Expected to Be Laws by Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 16.—With eleven measures awaiting the action of Gov. Wilson, a conference to-morrow between the Governor and the Democratic members of the Senate and Assembly, consideration by the House of the seven corporation bills, several important hearings scheduled, and an avalanche of legislation yet to be disposed of, the sixth week of the Legislature, beginning to-morrow, gives every promise of being a busy one.

One of the bills now awaiting the Governor's signature appropriates $35,000 to send the Acting Governor and staff and part of the National Guard to the inauguration.

The Governor will confer to-morrow with his party members of the House and Senate, and he will at that time probably express his views on the legislation he thinks should be enacted at this session.

The surprise of last week was the little difficulty that attended the passage through the Senate of the "seven sisters." Two Republicans, White of Burlington and Nicholas of Cumberland, voted for all of these anti-trust bills, while one of the measures received the minority's entire support. Three of the other four had but nominal opposition. That the series will go through the Assembly this week with the same celerity seems assured, and the bills will doubtless be approved by the Governor and have become State laws before Saturday.

When Senate President Fielder of Jersey City becomes Acting Governor on Saturday, March 1, he will receive a great demonstration at the State House by admirers, who are booming him for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination.

ART NOTES.

The conflict between the old and the new has been commemorated repeatedly in all forms of art and criticism. It is not so easy to undertake the reconciliation of the new with the old, and indicate the development of the modern from the ancient. The old wine, enriched and mellowed by the passage of time, is effectually concealed in the shining new bottles with their aggressive labels. In the great show opening to the public to-morrow at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory on Lexington Avenue, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth Streets, we find our opportunity, however, to learn the points of contact between an Ingres and a Maurice Denis, between a Corot and a Zak. It will not be done in one visit or in twenty and some of us may never find our right way along this psychological path that leads from somewhere to somewhere, but a first glimpse of the show proves that it offers real things, not sham, and that no one within reach of it can afford to ignore it.

Entering the great drill hall of the armory we find it divided into temporary galleries, lettered from A to R, with the four most important rooms in the central court and the others ranged about them. The entrance court contains sculpture and the walls are decorated by Robert W. Chanler's superb screens, which have never been publicly shown in America before, although they have been exhibited in the Paris Salons. The color, which has almost the depth of tone one gets from Chinese porcelains, the interesting zoological themes fresh with original observation and enlivened with a quaint humor, and the fine decorative spacing of the designs make of these screens a vigorous and splendid note of attraction for the entering visitor.

Passing to the right we find Gallery B, leading off with an American group of painters. Here are Jonas Lie, with "A Hill Top," the "Black Tea Pot," and other of his recent full colored paintings; Marion Beckett, whose charming, somewhat Whistlerian art has moved toward the newer school; Philip Hale with his dark and plastic group of art students; May Wilson Preston, George Luks, Ernest Lawson, Henry Fitch Taylor, and Elmer MacRae.

Gallery C is also American. Among the exhibitors are such dissimilar painters as Leon Dabo and Warshawsky, George Bellows, Aileen Dresser, Marsden Hartley, and Sidney Dale Shaw. In Gallery D are Ruth McEnery's nudes, the gray conceptions of Kenneth Hayes Miller, the extreme modernity of Margaret Zorach, and works by Glenn O. Colemen, Allen Tucker, H. W. Coates, and F. William Weber, among others. Gallery E has one wall given to J. Alden Weir, a profile in rose and gray, his "Factory Village," his beautiful study of field lilies, and a portrait. In the same gallery are Walt Kuhn, Arthur Davies, Bernard Gussow, and David Milne. It is easy to see that in this exhibition at least a democratic arrangement has been insisted upon. In Gallery F there is a wall of Hassams. Once we knew them as almost too brilliant for the naked eye to bear, but the eye in question has borne such violence of hue before reaching them that they seem to have retired behind a thin gray mist. In this gallery are also Wangant, Homer Boss, Brinley, Kenneth Frazer, and Katherine Dreier.

With Gallery G we come to Augustus John, Jack Yeats, Charles Conder, Phelan Gibb, and Walter Sickert. There is no special force of color in the general impression given by these painters, and even Conder's gleaming harmonies are somewhat dulled in the examples shown.

With Gallery H we reach the Frenchmen, and the general public will find them all its fancy painted. Matisse fills one wall with sharp, high notes of color, Maurice Denis shows important decorative studies, George Rouault is impressive in "Le Parade," and Zak has something distinctly his own to say in "Le Berger." We enter the company of the Cubists in Gallery I. Here are tetrahedrons and octahedrons and dodecahedrons; here are prisms and pyramids and parallelopipeds; here are plans and volumes and angles, a veritable Euclidean Paradise. And if we of the old-fashioned type are not asked to read the names attached to the pictures, if we are not urged to bring in the literary and story-telling element, we are entirely ready to confess that some very beautiful arrangements of form and color have come out of this fresh interpretation of the aim of art.

The first view of this tremendous exhibition gives, however, no chance for discussion of its varied qualities. We must stick to our last as the reporter of facts, not fancies nor opinions. It is a fact that in this gallery we find Picabia, who said that he was not a Cubist, and also Picasso, who never, to our knowledge, has denied the hard impeachment. Here also is the Cubist house, a dignified structure, with good spacing.

Gallery J is almost wholly given over to the haunting charms of Odilion Redon. There are in addition some drawings by Matisse and some paintings by Seurat and Bourdelle and Souza, but in the main there are flowers and horses and classic serious heads—pure Redon. Galleries K and L are given to drawings and water colors; M and N to the American painters again—Glackens, Maurer, Mager, Sloan, Karl Anderson, and others. In Gallery O we find Monet, Pisarro, Manet, Sisley, Degas, Lautree, Mary Cassat, Seurat, and Renoir, a thoroughly companionable group. In Gallery P are Corot, Delacroix, Goya, Daumier, A. P. Ryder, Courbet, Matthew Maris, Whistler, Ingres, Puvis de Chavannes, and a few others. In Gallery O are the works of that solemn and sane genius, Van Gogh, and here in Gallery R we find Cezanne and Gauguin, and more of Picasso and Matisse and Augustus John and Puvis de Chavannes.

It is out of the question to attempt more in this preliminary notice than the mere enumeration of the principal features of the exhibition, but this enumeration will serve to indicate to the public that the Association of American Painters and Sculptors has done what it has been promising to do, and it must be added that it has done it in a worthy manner. The Armory is satisfactory in point of lighting, size, and convenience, and the decoration of the vast spaces has been accomplished with a high degree of success.

Subway Side Doors Dangerous.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is there any way of making the side doors in the Subway trains less treacherous and dangerous? The poor Subway guard, who has only two eyes and three doors to look after, often closes the side door when the passenger is only half way in the train. The writer himself, only last week, was about to enter a train in the Subway when the side door closed with such force and velocity that but for the kind assistance of an adroit straphanger he would now be in a world where there are no Subways and no side doors. # FINE CAST TO SING 'CYRANO' ON FEB. 27

Gatti-Casazza Picks Date for Premiere of Walter Damrosch's Opera in English.

THEME FOR THE HERO'S NOSE

Amato as Cyrano, Martin as Christian, and Alda the Roxane—1,200 Pages to Rewritten Score.

General Manager Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan Opera Company announced Thursday evening, Feb. 27, as the date of the first performance of "Cyrano," Walter Damrosch's opera in English, libretto by W. J. Henderson, after the famous play by Edmond Rostand, made familiar to the public of two continents by Coquelin and Richard Mansfield. Rehearsals have been proceeding for weeks.

Alfred Hertz, who will conduct "Cyrano," has devoted himself enthusiastically to the preparation of the musical side of the opera, while upon Jules Speck has devolved the responsibility of training the artists in the intricate "stage business" which the action of the plan calls for. The scenery has been painted by Rovescalli of Milan, and the costumes were designed in the atelier of the Maison Muelle of Paris. The cast will be as follows:

|---|---|
| Cyrano | Pasquale Amato |
| Roxane | Frances Alda |
| Duenna | Marie Mattfeld |
| Lise | Vera Curtis |
| A Flower Girl | Louise Cox |
| Mother Superior | Florence Mulford |

First Wrote It Eleven Years Ago.

Mr. Damrosch conceived the idea of writing an opera on Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" twelve years ago while hearing a performance of that drama given by Mr. Mansfield. Subsequent hearings confirmed him in the impression that "Cyrano" was a wonderful subject for musical treatment, and at his request W. J. Henderson wrote an English libretto for him, using the Rostand drama as a basis, but condensing the play in many particulars and otherwise adapting it for a musical setting. Mr. Damrosch wrote the music, finishing it about eleven years ago. He also prepared a piano score, but became dissatisfied with his setting of the last act, and, although the publishers had engraved the plates for nearly the entire work, he decided to withdraw it from publication until he could find the leisure and the impulse to rewrite the fourth act, including the death of Cyrano, as he thought it should be written.

Thus the work lay for more than nine years until a year ago last Summer, when Mr. Damrosch looked again at his manuscript, the fourth act of which he had destroyed, and resolved to finish it as soon as leisure would permit. Meantime some of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera House had become interested in the work, and at their request Mr. Damrosch gave a hearing of the first act and excerpts from the second at his house a year ago with a few selected singers and a small chorus, the composer himself supplying the orchestra at the piano.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza and some of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera Company were present and decided to produce the work at the Metropolitan this Winter. Mr. Damrosch agreed to furnish them with the orchestra score completed before Sept. 1.

New Orchestral Scoring.

The end of May, 1912, he began work on the new fourth act at his Summer place at Westport, Lake Champlain, and at the end of three months he had completed not only the last act, but had written an entirely new orchestral scoring for the whole opera, numbering 1,200 score pages.

His first opera, based on Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter," was written completely under the thrall of Wagner. Since those days Mr. Damrosch's ideas on the music drama have changed some, and in his musical treatment of "Cyrano" he has gone back to a certain extent to the older operatic form.

A number of persons of the drama are, however, characterized by special themes, which are developed symphonically in the orchestra. Themes also depict Cyrano's proud swagger, his wit, and the romantic love he bears for Roxane. To characterize Cyrano's nose Mr. Damrosch uses a theme based on the whole tone scale, which in its unnatural intervals is intended to stand out against the rest of the music, which is based on the regular "old-fashioned" diatonic scale. Roxane is depicted in the beginning as a more or less artificial precieuse by music of ornate floridity, but who, through her love for Christian, develops the real note of womanhood.

Ysaye Gives Another Concert.

Eugen Ysaye gave another concert at Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon, and his contributions, both in selection and performance, were of a high order. They included Veracini's sonata in A minor, played very beautifully with the assistance of Camille Decreus; a chaconne of Vitali's, played with an organ accompaniment with the assistance of Frank Sealy, and the andante and finale of Vieuxtemp's Concerto No. 1 in E major. Between these numbers Manfred Malkin, pianist, played two Chopin numbers, Schumann's "Carneval," and the Bach-Liszt prelude and fugue in A minor. He added a Chopin number and a Bach bourée.

Schumann-Heink at the Metropolitan

Mme. Schumann-Heink was the feature of last night's concert at the Metropolitan. The contralto was heard in an air from "Samson et Dalila," after which she sang Brahms's "Sapphische Ode," and in the second part of the programme four songs in English by Landon Ronald, Mary Turner Salter, Louise Reichardt, and J. L. Malloy. She added two more songs to these. The other soloists were Umberto Macnez and Herbert Witherspoon. The orchestra was under the direction of Adolph Rothmeyer. The audience was a large one.

THE NEW YORK SYMPHONY.

Pauer Plays Liszt's A Major Concerto—'A Fairy Tale' by Victor Kolar

Max Pauer, who was the soloist at the New York Symphony Orchestra concert in Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon, played Liszt's piano concerto in A major. There is very little use in conjecturing why a solo performer chooses one or another piece to play, and conjecture might go far in finding an answer to the question why Mr. Pauer played this concerto. Perhaps he likes it. He played it with immense vigor and a good deal of brilliancy. The audience very much liked either the piece itself, or his resounding performance of it, or both, for he was repeatedly and enthusiastically recalled. Whether the admirers of Liszt believe it to be cheaper and tawdrier or less cheap and tawdry, poorer or richer in musical quality, or sounding to-day more outworn and old-fashioned, or less so, than Liszt's other concerto in E flat shall not be here conjectured. It might be safe to go so far as to say that the A major concerto is not so popular as its companion, for it is less played.

There was a new composition on the programme, heard for the first time. It was "A Fairy Tale," Op. 19, a symphonic poem by Victor Kolar. Mr. Kolar is one of the first violins of the orchestra, a Bohemian, 25 years old, a pupil of Dvorak. He has written an interesting and delightful composition that was well worth playing. Mr. Kolar scarcely betrays, by any native idiom or suggestive phrase, either his nationality or his instruction; his idiom, it may be said, is more "modern" than that of his master. His harmonic feeling relates him to some of the most recent workers in his craft. He is, perhaps, not burdened with musical ideas of overwhelming weight or originality, but the composition has abundant substance and is developed with skill and power—perhaps with a little too much length and discursiveness. Mr. Kolar wishes to consider his "Fairy Tale" as absolute music, and the only suggestion he makes as to its poetic content is "Youth and Love." Its greatest excellence, perhaps, is the skill in writing for the orchestra shown in it. The scoring is rich, substantial, and full of color and variety, and the instruments are treated with admirable certainty of touch. Mr. Kolar conducted his composition himself, and was abundantly complimented by applause and attention.

The concert began with an excellent performance of Brahms's beautiful Second Symphony.

TIVOLI OPERA HOUSE OPENING

Tetrazzini to be Heard in New Temple of Song on March 12.

The Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company will open the new Tivoli Opera House in San Francisco on Wednesday evening, March 12, when Luisa Tetrazzini will sing "Rigoletto." As part of Mme. Tetrazzini's former career was enacted in San Francisco, the selection is an apt one.

Mary Garden will make her San Francisco début on Saturday evening, March 15, in "Natoma," which, it will be remembered, has a Californian subject. The further performances of the company include "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," "Noel," "The Jewels of the Madonna," "Pagliacci," "Louise," "La Traviata," "Lucia," "Thaïs," "Tristan und Isolde," "Die Walküre," "Carmen," "Crispino e la Comare," "Hänsel und Gretel," "The Secret of Suzanne," and "The Quarreling Lovers."

POWELL TO PLAY HERE.

Pianist and Composer Will Appear with Zimbalist in Concert.

John Powell, the American pianist and composer, arrived yesterday from Europe after an absence of several years on the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, to appear in concert with Efrem Zimbalist, the violinist. The first concert will be given at Carnegie Hall on Feb. 25. His tour will be through the Middle West and South, he said.

Mr. Powell said that he intended to write a musical drama from Rudyard Kipling's "Jungle Stories," as he considered that the book was well adapted for setting to music of a dramatic nature, as Kipling's style was virile, strong, and terse. He said he also planned to compose a musical representation of the English Episcopal high-church service in the form of an oratorio.

Cohan & Harris have obtained the rights to Earl Biggers's latest novel, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." George M. Cohan will make of it a play, which is to have an early Fall production.

Marie Dressler opened a road tour last Saturday in "The Banqueteers," an entertainment near to the vaudeville form, in which leading numbers are given by herself, Mme. Yorska and Robert Drouet, Jefferson De Angelis, and several dancers.

The matinee on Wednesday will mark the fiftieth performance of "Fine Feathers" at the Astor Theatre, with Robert Edeson, Wilton Lackaye, Lolita Robertson, Max Figman, and Amelia Sumers.

Matinees of "The Whip" will be given at the Manhattan Opera House every afternoon this week, except to-morrow and Thursday.

"A Poor Liar," a one-act farce-comedy by Taylor Holmes, will have its first performance this afternoon at Keith's Union Square Theatre.

The first foreign film representation of the story of Salome will be presented this afternoon in the theatre at William Morris's Wonderland.

Lillian Russell, it is announced, will appear at the Fulton Theatre for seven nights and three matinees, beginning March 3, in a lecture entertainment, called "How to Live a Hundred Years," illustrated by kinemacolor pictures.

Arch Selwyn has completed arrangements with Jane Cowl, now playing the leading part in "Within the Law" at the Eltinge Theatre, whereby that actress will be featured in her role in that play for her appearance in several of the larger cities. A year from the coming Spring Miss Cowl will come into New York as a star under the management of Mr. Selwyn in a play being written for her use by one of the younger playwrights. She will continue to appear as May Turner in "Within the Law" at the Eltinge for the remainder of the present season. Within the last month Miss Cowl has received two important engagements in London, but has decided to remain in this country.

Arthur Hammerstein has completed arrangements with the Augustin Daly estate to make a revival of "The Geisha" at one of the Shubert theatres early in April. This was one of the successful Daly's Theatre productions, and was seen first there in November, 1896. It had been given by George Edwardes at Daly's Theatre, London, the April previous, and was revived again at the New York house two years after its first production. The book of the piece is by Owen Hall, the music by Sydney Jones and Lionel Monckton, and the lyrics by Harry Greenback. Mr. Hammerstein is now engaging the company that will be seen in the play.

WIDOWS' PENSIONS IN OPERATION HERE

Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor Starts Experiment.

ALLOWANCE FOR FIXED TERM

Mothers with Little Children Aided to Keep Up Homes with Grants of $8 to $12 Weekly.

While municipalities, the State Legislature, and the National Government are considering the advisability of establishing a system of pensions for widowed mothers, the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor has grappled with the problem by actually pensioning a number of widows, experience with whom will, it is expected, furnish valuable data for more extended work in this field, whether by private philanthropies or by the State, Nation, or municipality.

Of course, the association, like many other charitable organizations, has for a long time made grants of money to poor widows with young children. Last year, for example, out of the 3,400 families assisted by it, 845 were those of widows having a total of about 1,800 young children. But with the opening of this year it began the practice of promising a fixed sum per month to the widowed heads of a carefully selected number of families, in all of which some or all of the children were under working age.

The Certainty of Income.

"The certainty of income, however small, for a fixed period is of the essence of a real pension system," said Mrs. Helene Ingram, as she explained the plan and workings of the association's new departure. "Knowing that she can count upon so much money every month for five or six months, a woman can plan her expenditures in a way different from the hap-hazard manner which is characteristic of the life of many a poor family, even before it has come to the point of accepting or soliciting aid.

"Our pensions are carefully graduated to the needs of the particular families to which they are granted; we are not concerned to observe any predetermined per capita. Government estimates, I believe, put the average amount to be allowed for the support of each child in the family at $3 a week; but if we find, as we sometimes do, that $5 a week is needed, we do not hesitate to appropriate it. We look upon the beneficiaries of our pension system as families which have departed only temporarily from a normal state of self-support; and the purpose of the aid we give them is to restore normal conditions as soon as may be. Thus, it may be that a grant of a pension for five or six months may be quite sufficient to set upon their feet the members of a family in which the mother or one of the bread-winning children has suffered a long and expensive illness; while, if it is shown that three or four years must elapse before the children get through their rudimentary education and arrive at working age, a pension may be granted for that period."

The principal object of granting these pensions is to preserve families that without them would be broken up; to keep good mothers with their children, and the children out of institutions. With this end in view, women with small children whom they have hitherto been obliged to leave in day nurseries or in the care of elder children are advised and enabled to give up their work of scrubbing the floors of office buildings and to devote themselves to the nobler and more necessary work of being mothers. Often the pension granted may be larger than the woman's earnings from the occupation she is asked to give up. One woman, for instance, who was working for $5 a week in a factory, on which she had to support herself and two children, is now receiving a pension of $8 a week and is looking after her home and her children. Other pensions run as high as $10 and $12 a week. Smaller sums may be granted to supplement the incomes of households in which one or more of the children contribute something to the support of the family.

Twelve Families Now Pensioned.

"Twelve families are now receiving pensions from the association," said Mrs. Ingram. "The number is certain to be increased from week to week until the experiment has been tried with a large number of families. It is not expected that any of these widowed mothers will be permanent pensioners; all our cases are hopeful. A few are likely to require the aid for three or four years, and there is no reason why a pension for as long a period as five or six years should not be considered. Of course, if any of the experiments should prove to be unsuccessful—if, for instance, the children of a certain mother should be found to be better off in an institution than in her care—the experiment in that particular case would not be extended beyond the term originally agreed upon. But the association is in a better position to judge of the merits of applicants than a State or municipal pension bureau would be. It has been giving relief—though not in the form of pensions—for seventy years, and most of the families on whose behalf pensions are sought are known to its visitors and officers."

Every application must state the applicant's name, age, occupation, wages, and defects if any; her address, the number of rooms the family occupies and the rent paid for them; the date and cause of the husband's death; the number of children in the family, with their ages and names; nationality and religion; the names of near relatives, with their addresses; a summary of the conditions which call for relief, and the amount of the pension asked for and the period for which it will be required.

Early this month Assemblyman Levy introduced at Albany a bill to establish under the City Charter a Department of Home Assistance for "the relief of widows with young children." This department is to be administered by a board composed of the Commissioner of Charities and eight other members to be appointed by the Mayor from a list submitted to him by the executives of several of the most important charitable organizations of the city. They are empowered to grant relief to dependent widows of good habits and character who are the mothers of two or more children under the age of 16 years. The measure does not provide for a fixed-period pension plan except in so far as it specifies that no grant of relief shall be made by the Board of Trustees for a longer period than six months without renewal by the board.

CHESTER S. LORD QUITS SUN.

32 Years Its Managing Editor and 41 Years on Its Staff.

Chester S. Lord, managing editor of The Sun for thirty-two years, and a member of The Sun staff for forty-one years, has resigned. He explained his resignation yesterday, saying:

"For a number of years I have been anxious to relinquish newspaper work. The duties of managing editor of a big New York newspaper demand unremitting, alert attention all day and far into the night, and I feel that I have had my share of them in the thirty-two years I have held the place. I came to The Sun forty-one years ago, and Mr. Dana made me managing editor in 1880, and I recall with pleasure that for seventeen years thereafter, until his death, I was his right-hand man.

"I have participated actively in eleven Presidential campaigns, beginning with that of 1872, in which I reported the campaign speeches of Horace Greeley. I am going despite the protests of all my associates here, for the sole reason that I want to relinquish some of my activities."

Mr. Lord has been for many years one of the Regents of the State University. He retired in 1904, when the Board of Regents was reduced in number, but was reappointed four years ago. He was Secretary of the Lotos Club from 1894 to 1905, and is now Vice President of the club.

REVENUE FROM VAULTS.

McAneny's Bureau Collects $140,000 for Encroachments.

The annual report of the Bureau of Design and Survey, established by Borough President McAneny in 1911, shows that the bureau has collected $140,000 from the owners of sixty-seven vaults built into city property. The bureau surveyed 240 vaults, most of them in the financial district, and found that the city was not receiving proper fees for some encroachments.

The bureau was organized to take over all the surveying and preparation of plans formerly cared for by the Bureau of Sewers, the Bureau of Highways, and the Topographical Bureau. Under the old system thousands of maps and plans were scattered through the files of three bureaus without co-ordination or proper indexing. The new bureau is engaged in indexing and filing the old maps, as well as new drawings, as fast as these are made.

Information has been accumulated about surface conditions, about water, gas and steam mains, subways, sewers, electric ducts, mail tubes, vaults, and so on, and this information is at the disposal of any one contemplating a street opening. The mapping of all building and curb lines, now under way, is expected to save the taxpayers many dollars which otherwise would go for litigation.

PLAN TO POPULARIZE THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Now That It Is Thoroughly Organized, Special Efforts Will Be Made to Aid Readers.

BRANCHES WELL PATRONIZED

Children Enjoyed Room in the Main Building—Some 8,000,000 Books Circulated Last Year.

"No matter who you are or what your work or business is, we can help you. Come to us." This will be the slogan in the future of the New York Public Library, according to Dr. J. S. Billings, the Director. In making public the annual report for the library for 1912 he said that the policy for 1913 would be to make it popular. The Trustees of the library had determined, he asserted, that the institution should be made helpful, in a practical way, to every citizen.

"President Cadwalader and his associates," said Dr. Billings, "are discussing plans for making the New York Public Library something more than an agreeable resort for the general reader and for visitors, and in order to make this possible the Trustees have been earnestly discussing ways and means of interesting everybody, from the Battery to the Westchester line, in the library system.

"Twenty months ago the New York Public Library started out with this notion, but the labors of the organization in the new central home at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street were so enormous that the executors found practically no time to study ways and means for reaching the people, but this year the library is to be vastly more than an immense palace of marble containing thousands of books, the plan being to make it the grammar and high school of the practical as well as the intellectual needs of the people."

According to Dr. Billings's report there are now more than 2,000,000 volumes and pamphlets in the library system, 2,090,220 in the central building, and in the forty branch libraries in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Richmond. The central library received 2,120,079 readers and visitors last year, an average of 1,112 people registered daily in the reading rooms of the central and branch libraries. The library system circulated 7,969,664 books, a marked increase over 1911, and it was found that the per capita reading in Manhattan, Richmond, and the Bronx was 26 volumes.

The annual report shows that interest in American history increased in 1912. More than 68,000 volumes were read by a daily average of 216 persons. Among the valuable acquisitions in this department were works by Catlin on the Indians, and some of Catlin's original manuscripts; J. O. Lewis's "The Aboriginal Portfolio," and Sir William Johnson's "Accounts of Conferences and Treaties with the Indians." The feature of this department was the exhibition of 350 portraits of the Indians of the United States.

The brightest feature of the library's activities, according to the report, was its work with children of all ages and sizes. Some 2,959,044 small readers patronized the circulating books. The children enjoyed in the central library a large, brightly lighted room, crowded with all of the stories that little people like best. The library had story-tellers for them, pleasant-voiced young women who knew "Jack the Giant Killer" and other stories by heart. Then, too, there were wonderful Russian picture books, with illustrations like nothing that was ever seen before in this country; German, Swedish, and Dutch picture and story books, and every kind of book that could amuse or benefit a small person. The children's department was so popular that a good many thousand grown-ups frequented it. Mothers found it a blessing, because they could leave their children in the library for hours while shopping.

The room for the blind attracted many thousands of visitors. The library had last year 21,938 embossed books circulating among the blind, and it employed teachers who did much important work. The department is increasing in public interest and has the hearty approval of the United States Government.

The circulation of books presented some interesting figures. There were nearly 8,000,000 books circulated in 1912, an increase of some 55,000 over 1911. The heaviest total circulation was at the Seward Park Branch, in the heart of the east side, while the largest increases were at the Morrisania, Tremont, and Ninety-sixth Street branches. The quality of reading was noteworthy. Only 47 per cent. of the readers called for fiction, a very low percentage for public libraries. Literature showed 13 per cent., the arts 6 per cent., and biography 6 per cent. The St. Raphael Branch handles the most fiction, 60 per cent., but leads at the same time in the call for religious books. Harlem and the 125th Street branches find the most demand for sociology, while Tompkins Square readers call mostly for works of science.

ROCKEFELLER CLASS GROWS.

Audience of 240 Men Hears Him on "Wanted, Power."

There was a record attendance yesterday morning at the men's Bible class in the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, presided over by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the number as announced at the close of the service being 240.

Mr. Rockefeller's address held the close attention of the class for thirty minutes. "Wanted, Power," was his subject.

Of the need of moral power the speaker said:

"Think of the temptations that come to us in business. We need discernment. You all know that often the difference between the right and the wrong in business is no broader than a hair. What is needed by all is that great source of all power, spiritual power. There are situations that we all have to meet when nothing but the sustaining power of God can avail us. Let us rise to the best that is in us. To get the power we need we must be willing to sacrifice everything we have, for in this way alone can we become connected with the source of all power."

Temple Ansche Chesed Benefit.

In aid of the funds of the allied societies of the Temple Ansche Chesed of Harlem a benefit was given last night at the Broadway Theatre, at which a substantial sum was realized. Among the artists who volunteered their services were Al Jolson and Melville Ellis, Harry Fox and Yancsi Dolly, Adele Ritchie, Doyle and Dixon, Sydney Grant and Charlotte Greenwood, Hilarion and Rosalie Ceballos, Fannie Brice, Taylor Holmes, Anna Chandler assisted by Al. Piantadosi, Sophye Barnard, Helene Davis, Lou Anger, Johnstone and Wentworth, Regina de Cromer assisted by Florence Virginia, the Cooper Brothers, Lillian Bradley, the Four Musical Cornets, Joe Ward, and Harry Delson.

Ginsberg and Boyne in Concert.

Giacomo Ginsberg, baritone, and Dale Brown Boyne, tenor, gave a concert in Aeolian Hall last evening, assisted by Mischa Gusikhoff, violinist, and Dolly Pech Lakley, soprano. W. A. Parson was the accompanist.

Ann Arbor First 4s appear cheap, safe and attractive. They have received interest promptly since 1895 and are a first and closed mortgage at about $24,000 a mile. At present prices on the New York Stock Exchange the bonds yield about 5.25%.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

The decline which stocks have suffered have carried the general level of quotations to the lowest of the year, and to the lowest point touched since the Autumn of 1911. Many say that stocks are cheap, but few are buying. Wherein lies the explanation of this apparent contradiction? Quite possibly, as many believe, it is to be found chiefly in the restriction which unsettled politics, using the term broadly, has put upon the investment market and upon ordinary financial operations. "Yes, stocks seem cheap," remarked the other day a member of one of the great international houses, "but are equities ever cheap at a time of political attack on the established order of things? Certainly the established order is under attack to-day, and with the incoming of the new Administration the attack is likely to increase in violence." Thus is put one explanation of the progressive decline which has been under way, and which has extended not alone to stocks in which speculation has been large in the past, but to those stocks, as well, which are looked upon as specially entitled to the designation of investment stocks. It is an explanation which lays special stress on the concern with which a section of the financial community regards the advent of Democratic control of the National Government. To that extent it is a partisan view. But there can be no doubt that it is a view which has been exerting considerable influence. It has served to check purchases of stocks by some who in other respects consider conditions bearing on security values satisfactory.

But Wall Street is by no means unanimous in this view. Here is the way this same matter is regarded by a member of another of the country's foremost banking houses: "I think most of us exaggerate the adverse influence of the social changes which we see going on. It is inevitable that labor should assert itself and that some of the ideas which we have held regarding property rights should undergo change. But in the long run I think we shall find that we are little the worse off for all this. We talk so much of our troubles that we put too high a value upon them as unsettling influences in the security market. Politicians are active here, but no more active than they are in the rest of the world." Thus runs a view which places relatively little importance upon politics as a restrictive force in the financial and commercial movement of the country. A matter on which opinion is thus greatly divided may be the chief restriction under which the stock market has been laboring, but it can hardly be regarded as the sole important factor. A suggestion of one other important factor of similar effect is contained in the rise which occurred this past week in call money.

Since the turn of the year ours has been the freest of the money markets of the world, and to us Europe looked for help in the shape of large shipments of gold. Our surplus was by no means so great that the loss of close to $25,000,000 gold left our money market undisturbed. Not since 1907 have call rates been as high at this season as they were last week, and with the exception of that year and 1906 the rates were the highest for the date in more than ten years. All of this indicates a money position closer than is comfortable for this season of the year, when relaxation has usually occurred following the strain of the year-end. In a very considerable degree this is but one of the results of political disturbance. Europe's uneasiness over the Balkan war and the fears to which that war gave rise closed the purse strings of more countries than one and have left Europe even now, after the worst of the fears have passed, unwilling to engage freely in financial undertakings or to venture into new enterprises. Herein lies another of the influences which account for what has been going on in the stock market. The money situation, though it would be greatly relieved by the happy closing of the Balkan war and of the questions to which it has given rise, would hardly be returned to a position of entire ease by the declaration of peace in Europe. It is under the influence of the fact that the demand for capital the world over is very great. Indeed, the supply of new securities is only limited by the ability of the market to take them. In London new issues have been crowded on an unwilling market to such an extent that only about half of the offerings of the past six weeks have been taken off the hands of the underwriters. This is a factor which must needs be counted with long after the troubles now besetting European politics have been cleared away.

Fortunately, indications are not lacking that the hope of early peace is growing apace in banking circles abroad. Foreign orders in this market have been increasing slightly, and the participation of European bankers in the Southern Pacific underwriting to the extent of $50,000,000 suggests very clearly that the clouds on the political horizon of Europe seem to these bankers to be breaking up. The whole world would feel relief at the declaration of peace, but the influence of that happy event upon the security markets might well be tempered shortly by the fresh demands for capital which almost inevitably would appear with a better market for their absorption.

Other matters to which Wall Street gave much attention while prices were declining last week will in the ordinary course of events prove of much less lasting influence. The fear of a strike on the Eastern railways was one of these, though this was minimized by the fact that it seemed incredible to most that the controversy between the firemen and the railroads would go to the length of a strike. Wall Street worried, too, over the threatened enforced incorporation of the Stock Exchange, over the latest anthracite case suit against the Lackawanna, and over the possibility of intervention in Mexico. It worried, too, or affected to be worried, toward the close of the week over reports of new financing by several important railroad systems, including the Pennsylvania Railroad. What in a different temper of the market would have been greeted as a privilege was looked upon as an embarrassment. There were those who thought that most of the selling predicated on this matter was being done by those who did not own the stocks and would in no case be called upon to subscribe to a new issue, but at all events there were not enough who felt differently to offer effective opposition to the pressure which was put on the market on the score of forthcoming new stock issues.

Indeed, it was characteristic of the market as a whole that the great majority were holding aloof, leaving only the bolder spirits to take a position in the market. And more than a bare majority of these seemed more disposed to sell than to buy. Toward the end of the week the market gave some signs of having reached firmer ground, for it rallied somewhat easily after Thursday's decline, but only in an irregular way, which left it still an open question whether prices could be expected to improve to any substantial extent, except with the help of favorable news of a positive kind.

LONDON MARKET STAGNANT.

American Securities Rally in Sympathy with Wall Street.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Feb. 16.—Political conditions abroad continue to dominate the stock markets. The Balkan war, the uncertain situation regarding Austria and Russia, the fighting in Mexico, the disturbances in Japan, and the endless delays in the Chinese loan issues all had an influence in holding back business.

The Stock Exchange closed the week in a stagnant mood, but, if anything, the tendency was firmer, helped by the belief that the Mexican revolution was nearing its end.

American securities, which were neglected throughout the week, in the absence of encouragement from Wall Street, rallied on Saturday, in sympathy with Wall Street's improvement, and closed generally higher on the day's transactions.

The monetary outlook is better than for some time past, and a reduction of the Bank rate is expected at no distant date.

PARIS FEELS MEXICAN UNREST.

Market Conditions in General, However, Are Healthy.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—The Bourse continues to be idle, prices sagging because of the non-activity which is largely caused by the unfavorable news from all quarters.

Market conditions, however, are very healthy. Liquidation is most easy and money cheap.

The Bourse's attitude next week will depend entirely on the political news. The Mexican unrest is beginning to tell here. The stock of the National Bank of Mexico, although held in strong hands, has lost considerably.

GLOOM IN BERLIN.

No Hope of Improvement Till the Political Outlook Changes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 16.—Another week has passed without the slightest indication of any improvement on the Boerse, and it becomes increasingly apparent that no betterment can be hoped for as long as the political situation remains in the present troubled state. Attention is now directed to the Bulgarian, Rumanian, and Russian situations, and traders are pessimstic over the outlook.

Depressing market factors were continued in the unfavorable situation in copper and recessions in New York, coupled with fears that the American Government were preparing further anti-trust prosecutions.

The money market stiffened further, and hope of a discount reduction in the near future has vanished.

Mainzer, finance; Daniel C. Wells, hotels; Wilbur E. Mallalieu, tests; William Johnson, press; George W. Olvany, programme and advertising; Abraham L. ## WANT STATE GUARANTEE LAW

Union Bank Victims Seek to Prevent Similar Failures.

A State law similar to that in operation in Oklahoma guaranteeing depositors of State banks against the loss of their deposits, should these institutions fail, was urged at a meeting of about fifty depositors of the defunct Union Bank of Brooklyn, held yesterday at the Clarendon Hotel, that borough. The meeting was called to give those depositors who cannot go to Albany on Tuesday an opportunity to be heard on charges made against the State Banking Department under a previous administration by Assistant District Attorney Louis H. Goldstein in behalf of the Union Bank depositors. In these charges the Banking Department is held liable for the loss sustained by the depositors of the bank, because the institution was allowed to open its doors when it was insolvent.

Assistant District Attorney Goldstein, Dr. E. J. Rohrer, Chairman of the Depositors' Committee; John C. F. Bauer, Henry Nieland, and others addressed the meeting. Mr. Nieland scored the State Banking Department for what he called its lax methods of investigating the State banks, particularly the Union Bank.

Speaking on the proposed law to have the State reimburse the depositors of failed banks, Mr. Goldstein said:

"The measure will have this effect. It will be a safeguard against crooked administrations of State banks in the future. If the State is responsible for the depositors' funds, I doubt if there will be any bank failures."

BROKERS TO CLEAN HOUSE.

New Association Aims to Drive Out Bucket Shops and Swindlers.

Norbert R. Pendergast, Chairman of the New York Committee on the organization of the International Association of Brokers, announced yesterday that Lieut. Gov. Martin H. Glynn had been added to the list of speakers for the dinner to be held at the Waldorf on Feb. 19, and that among those at the speakers' table would be Lewis L. Clark, President of the American Exchange National Bank; Charles H. Sabin, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company; John W. Patten, President of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, and William M. Kingsley, President of the United States Trust Company.

The convention will be held in the day, and brokers from all over the country will be present.

"The principal objects of the association," said Mr. Pendergast yesterday, "are the protection of the public against swindlers who call themselves brokers, and prey upon the savings of the ignorant, and the protection of the brokers themselves. This organization will practically mean the elimination of the bucketshop, to say nothing of the unscrupulous promoter, and will undoubtedly place the brokers throughout this country on a footing that they have never heretofore enjoyed. It means the end of the 500 per cent. Millers and Burr Brothers and all such rascals, and it will save the Government no end of money when this organization has been completed. That New York has finally taken hold of this movement is evident by the class of men that are represented on the various committees. There is no question that this organization can do no end of good, and it is to be hoped that live, active men will be put at the head of it."

Mr. Pendergast also announced that the Reception Committee would consist of the following:

Representing the New York Stock Exchange—Prentice Kellogg, Walter Taylor, William Borland, J. Carlisle, F. H. Hopkins, Kenneth Schley, George M. Sidenberg, W. K. Bird, C. Knoblauch, Henry Post, Eugene Meyer, Jr.

Representing the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York—W. E. de Aguero, Gerry Philbrick, W. S. Silkworth.

Representing the New York Curb Association—J. L. McCormack, William G. Gallagher, H. B. Sargent.

Representing the Boston Stock Exchange—S. B. Pearmain, George T. Rice, J. B. Hubbard, A. C. Anthony, G. N. Towle, C. M. Cabot.

Pending in Court of Appeals.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 16.—The Court of Appeals is in recess until Feb. 24. Thirty appeals from orders have been noticed for argument, and will consume the first three days of the new term, which will continue four weeks. There still remain fifty cases to be heard on the old calendar. These will occupy the court to the third week of the new term before the new calendar, which was ordered for Feb. 10, can be taken up. The new calendar contains 627 causes.

$41,000,000 FOR NEW TRACKS.

Canadian Railway Is Spending This Sum This Year on Extensions.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—An expenditure of $41,000,000 on the construction of new trackage, principally through the prairie provinces, is to be made this year by the three largest railroad systems of Canada. This undertaking will establish a record, exceeding the extensions made in 1912, when about 2,000 miles of new track were built at a cost of $30,000,000. The work has already begun, it was announced here to-day.

The Canadian Northern will build extensions and branches in Alberta and Saskatchewan, and will tap almost every section. One line as far north as Peace River is being considered. Another branch will be built from Sturgis, in Saskatchewan, toward Hudson's Bay, a distance of 450 miles. A line from Regina to Moose Jaw is also contemplated. A line will also be constructed from Portage la Prairie to Fort William, at the head of the Great Lakes, to prevent congestion in the yards at Winnipeg.

The line to be built down the Fraser and Thompson Rivers will demand heavy bridging. Ten structures already have been contracted for at a cost of nearly $1,500,000. One tunnel near Yale will be more than 2,000 feet long.

The track building will furnish work for several thousand men.

FUEL COST NOW TROUBLES BRITONS

Company Organized to Produce and Refine Petrol—Show Question Up Abroad.

Anxiety about the rising price of motor fuel is not confined to this country. The latest evidence of the same feeling abroad is the organization of a motor owners' petrol combination in England to own its own producing wells and refineries and benefit its members, not by cutting prices, but by paying them dividends and bonuses. This scheme has been put in the form of a company which plans to sell its crude oil direct, if the market warrants such a procedure, and otherwise to refine it at Thames Haven. The chief holdings of the company are in Austria, and one of them, called the "Rockefeller," is said to be on a paying basis at present, making a profit of $110,000 a year. Other properties in the Galician oil field are called the Rajskie, Starawies, Komancza, Dydynska, Wroblik, and Rymanow.

Britishers, like their fellow-automobilemen on this side of the Atlantic, are not a little concerned about the show problem. It is not so complex a question with the Britons, since the shows there are already far less numerous than here. However, there is now a movement on foot to hold but one motor show each year in the United Kingdom, that at the Olympia. The trouble seems to be that the provincial shows, like that just held at Edinburgh, do not prove paying investments from the dealers' and agents' point of view.

In Automobile Row the announcement on Saturday that one of the Vice Presidents, Leigh Best, of the American Locomotive Company, was to take over full charge of the automobile department of that company, was regarded as an omen of a shakeup in the local personnel.

You are hereby notified that on the 6th day of February, 1913, an order of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York was made and filed in a cause now pending in the said court wherein The Pennsylvania Steel Company and another are complainants, and New York City Railway Company and others are defendants, and in three other causes, respecting the proof of claims for preference against the estates of the said Companies. The said order provides:

1. That any claimant against Metropolitan Street Railway Company whose claim has been allowed by the Special Master appointed in the first of the above-mentioned causes, or is pending before the said Special Master and any claimant against the New York City Railway Company, whose claim has been allowed against said Company by the said Special Master and who claims a preference in payment out of the estate of Metropolitan Street Railway Company or any part thereof, or out of the proceeds of the sale of any of its property or the income therefrom, whether or not covered by mortgage or other lien, may, on or before March 15, 1913, present to the Special Master hereinafter appointed, a statement of claim for preference in payment out of the estate of Metropolitan Street Railway Company over any or all creditors of Metropolitan Street Railway Company. Such claimants may, if they choose, present typical cases, and until further order of the court no claim for preference which is represented by a typical case need be presented to the Special Master.

2. That no such claimant who fails to file a claim for preference pursuant to Subdivision 1 hereof on or before March 15, 1913, shall thereafter be permitted to assert a preference over any creditor of Metropolitan Street Railway Company in respect of the distribution of the assets now or hereafter in the hands of the Receiver of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, or available for the payment of its creditors, unless the claim of such claimant is entitled to a preference under the decisions of the court upon some claim for preference filed hereunder as aforesaid. # BRAND-NEW PLANS FOR SUBWAY SYSTEM

Maltbie and Mitchel Come Now with Figures Showing City Can Do Its Own Building.

AND RUN THE LINES ITSELF

Substitute for Dual Plans Out—Legislation and Constitution Amendments Possible Expedients.

Commissioner Maltbie and John Purroy Mitchel sent yesterday to chairman McCall of the Public Service Commission a plan mapped out for new subways to be built by the city, and, if necessary, operated by the city, without the aid of private corporations, and to do nearly all that the dual system would accomplish. The specifications are on the same lines as the dual system, and the money for construction is to come partly from the city's treasury and partly from the sale of special rapid-transit bonds to the public. If this system were built one of the departures from the dual system in Manhattan would be the abandonment of the scheme of continuous east end west side lines. The Interborough would hold its present route, twisting across the city at Forty-second Street, and the city would have an exactly similar line running north of Fortieth Street, along Lexington Avenue and south of Fortieth Street, along Seventh Avenue and Varick Street, with a crosstown line in Fortieth Street, the precise equivalent of the present Forty-second Street line.

It is notable that Commissioner Maltbie and President Mitchel assume that the Interborough and the B. R. T. would spend their own money in the construction of such lines as could only be operated in connection with their present systems. These possible improvements are not marked on the map.

In sending their suggestions to Chairman McCall last night Commissioner Maltbie and President Mitchel enclosed this letter:

Feb. 15, 1913.

The Hon. Edward E. McCall, Chairman Public Service Commission for the First District.

Dear Mr. McCall: As you know, we, the undersigned, have always believed that an independent city-built system of subways is preferable to any arrangement with existing companies for construction in partnership. Feeling that you would like to know the alternative to the dual plan which we have to suggest in case the Interborough and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company declined to accede to a revision of the proposed contracts in a manner to fully protect the city, and believing that an appreciation of the fact that the city has at its command resources that put it in a position of independence will strengthen your hands in dealing with the question which is now before you, we transmit herewith a statement of the alternative which we have to suggest, in the form of a map and a brief outline, descriptive of an independent, city-built system and the method of financing it. The detailed estimates, calculations, and figures which support the statements and conclusions in the outline sent you herewith are in our possession. He need not tell you that we will be glad at any time to place these in your possession and to discuss with you, in the fullest manner, all phases of the plan which we now present.

Trusting that this suggestion may prove of service to your in dealing with the difficult problem that confronts you, we are, most respectfully yours,

MILO R. MALTBIE.
J. PURROY MITCHEL.

Don't Object to Dual System.

Mr. Maltbie and Mr. Mitchell in the memorandum they have submitted to Chairman McCall, say that they have outlined this system of city-built, and perhaps city-operated, lines because they have been accused of attacking the dual system without having any alternative to offer. They are willing, in the first place, that the dual system be adopted, provided, "first, that the contracts with the Interborough and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Companies be revised in such manner as to cut therefrom the prodigal gifts to private corporations and to insert therein adequate provision for municipal control and municipal recapture, and that the contracts as thus revised be offered to the companies for acceptance or rejection within two weeks from the time of submission."

Only in the event of the refusal of these alterations by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit and the Interborough do they propose their alternative plan, which they maintain is preferable to that of the dual system. They gave this outline of it:

1. Construction by the city of an independent, city-owned, universal five-cent-fare rapid transit system reaching into every borough of the City of New York, as shown by the accompanying map.
2. Construction by the companies of those lines that can be operated only in connection with their existing systems.
3. The third-tracking and extension of the Manhattan-Bronx elevated lines, including joint use of lines on Jerome Avenue, White Plains Road, and in Queens.
4. The third-tracking and reconstruction of the Brooklyn elevated lines, including a "crosstown" subway, extensions to Jamaica, Lutheran Cemetery, and into Manhattan via the Williamsburg, Manhattan, and Brooklyn Bridges, with operation through the loop lines in Manhattan and Brighton Beach connection via Flatbush Avenue.

The new plan, its advocates maintain, takes every new line proposed in the dual system and taps four boroughs—the Bronx, Queens, Manhattan, and Brooklyn. While the dual system would allow a 5-cent fare to Coney Island or to those parts of Brooklyn reached by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit alone only from points in Manhattan south of Fifty-ninth Street, the new plan would give a 5-cent fare to Coney Island and many parts of Queens and Brooklyn from all points on the east side of Manhattan and Jerome Avenue and Westchester Avenue in the Bronx, which would be served by the suggested municipal line.

These are the suggestions for operating the system:

(a.) That, in view of the action taken by the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate in the Summer of 1911, a contract for operation of such system in conjunction with the Brooklyn elevated lines be offered to the B. R. T. Company upon terms that will protect the public interests, guarantee municipal control and provide for recapture upon practical terms, with free transfers at all connecting points; or

(b.) That the independent system be leased to an operator, such as Mr. William G. McAdoo, upon the basis of interest and sinking fund for the private capital invested in equipment and a fair division of profits with the city; or

(c.) That an operating company be employed to run the independent system on the basis of compensation for service, all surplus profits being reserved for the city; or

(d.) That the independent system be operated by the city itself.

Advantages as They See Them.

After maintaining that their plan is just as advantageous to the development of the city as is the dual system, Messrs. Maltbie and Mitchel argue that it has besides advantages of its own. They say:

1. It provides a complete and comprehensive system instead of disconnected sections which, if recaptured under the dual plan, could not be operated without loss, inconvenience, and large additional investment.
2. It gives the city complete control of the new subways, as the amount to be paid in case of recapture would be small and the transfer to a new operator would be easy.
3. In view of the limited investment of private capital the operating lease could be made for a short period instead of forty-nine years, which would strengthen the city's control and enable it to change operators in case any lessee should attempt to deal unfairly with the public or to give bad service.
4. It obviates the guarantee to a private corporation of continued excessive profits based upon artificial and indecent congestion, while under the contracts now being considered these excessive profits would be guaranteed for fifty-three years against the possibilities of competition of new companies and new lines.
5. The city will avoid capitalizing and repaying to bankers large discounts on bonds.
6. By holding out to the operator a prospect of a share of divisible profits after carrying charges have been earned it offers an incentive to economy and efficiency, and eliminates the incentive to financial manipulation; whereas under the pending contracts the operator would be tempted to divert income to subsidiary companies, to inflate payrolls, and to disregard economy as soon as its preferentials have been earned, thus imposing on the city [illegible] cost of all such manipulation, [illegible] and inefficiency.
7. It would [illegible] the use of the income and payrolls [illegible] subways for political purposes or for the purpose of preventing recapture through control of political organizations.
8. It permits the construction of extensions in the near future to open up new areas in the Bronx, Queens, Brooklyn, and Richmond, as the city will receive more than interest and sinking fund on its investment, and will thereby secure the exemption of its rapid transit bonds from the debt limit.
9. It avoids the prospect of long continued deficits with the resultant burden upon the taxpayers or the impairment of the city's credit by the issue of securities to pay unearned interest.
10. It does not force the city, as does the dual plan, to choose between indecent congestion in its new subways and loss of interest and sinking fund upon the city's investment with the resultant paralysis of future rapid transit development.
11. Finally, this plan carries out the policy indorsed by the people in the recent municipal election, and subscribed to by every member then elected to the Board of Estimate, for the construction of a city-built, city-controlled subway system, of whose profits the city will receive its fair share.

Their Plan of Raising Funds.

Borough President McAneny and Controller Prendergast have always argued that the chief reasons for the city's bargain with the present companies were the lack of city funds for the complete construction of a subway system of its own. This is how Messrs. Maltbie and Mitchel meet this contention:

Their construction cost is put at $207,000,000. Of this amount $58,000,000 has already been reckoned against the debt limit in connection with construction along Lexington Avenue, Broadway, Fourth Avenue, Brooklyn, and so on. Therefore there remains $149,000,000 to be provided. They believe that this amount could be raised thus, they say:

1. On the basis of the Controller's report of Jan. 2, 1912, and the determination of the Appellate Division, there is available for municipal purposes to-day about $157,000,000. If this entire amount were devoted to the construction of subways, the independent system could be completed, leaving the increase of borrowing margin from year to year to care for general municipal needs. As a matter of fact, contracts to cover the entire construction cost could not be let immediately. Before the entire amount were needed there would be an increase in real estate assessments which would permit the city to proceed with most pressing municipal demands and at the same time complete the system out of the increased real estate assessments available on July 1, 1913, and 1914.

2. The city could immediately appropriate out of its available credit $100,000,000 for construction, which would leave less than $60,000,000 to be provided for by other means. To raise this fund, legislation would be required to permit the city to mortgage the rapid transit lines and to issue under such mortgage 5 per cent. rapid transit certificates, secured by the property and the income therefrom, with $158,000,000 of city money behind these certificates on property whose total cost would be $207,000,000.

Termed a Sound Investment.

These certificates would be as sound and safe an investment as any railroad security on the market and a better-paying investment than city bonds. Naturally, New York bankers are inclined at present to discredit such certificates, both because this plan is competitive with that favored by the strongest financial powers in this country, and also because it would tend to draw from the banks the funds which the people would be glad to invest in the proposed certificates. A thoroughly advertised popular sale would result in an oversubscription of the issue at or above par. The plan is not new, but in various forms has been successfully adopted in other cities.

3. A constitutional amendment exempting all rapid transit bonds and placing them in the same category with water bonds would put the city in a position to finance the independent system without difficulty. Such a constitutional amendment would require two years for its adoption, passing through two Legislatures and a referendum. In the meantime there is available $100,000,000, and at a pinch $150,000,000, of city funds of the general margin of credit for construction. It is manifest, therefore, that there are ample funds on hand to carry construction up to the time that additional funds would become available under such constitutional amendment.

In this calculation nothing has been said about the cost of equipping the independent system. The projectors contend, however, that with a city-built system costing more than $200,000,000 there is no reasonable prospect that an operator willing to provide the equipment himself would be hard to find, but if it were decided that it were better to equip as well as construct the subways out of city funds, the $50,000,000 or $65,000,000 necessary could be raised by one of the methods outlined.

FINDS NEW COUNTERFEITS.

Astoria Paying Teller First to Detect Spurious $1 Bills.

The Treasury Department credits Lincoln Cornell, paying teller of the Astoria Branch of the Corn Exchange Bank, with the first detection of an extremely dangerous counterfeit $1 silver certificate, which appears already to have obtained considerable circulation in this city. It is so skillfully made, that, according to the official report, even an expert would pronounce it genuine at first glance.

This is the description:

Check letter, B; front plate number, 8,423; back plate number, 3,612; J. C. Napier, Register of the Treasury; Lee McClung, Treasurer of the United States.

Examination under strong glass shows: Top line, front of note in border, the white letters "This certifies that there has been deposited in the Treasury of the" are poorly done and show white blotches on the black background between letters; also, some letters are not clear, being imperfectly formed; portraits, Lincoln and Grant, when compared with genuine, are coarse; so well done that, when not compared with genuine, they would not attract attention; color of seal, large "1," and numbering slightly lighter blue than genuine, but scarcely noticeable; line "Register of the Treasury," under Napier's signature, letters appear long and light, while letters in line "Treasurer of the United States," under McClung's signature, are rather heavy and short; both should be alike. Back of note excellent.

The Government detectives believe that the note is probably printed from etched plates.

PRESIDENT TO OPEN A BLIND LIGHTHOUSE

Taft, Choate, and Miss Helen Keller Will Speak at Dedication on Washington's Birthday.

BUILDING WILL BE SHOWN

And Many New Devices for the Aid and Comfort of the Sightless—$100,000 Still Needed.

On Washington's Birthday President Taft will formally open the new Lighthouse which the New York Association for the Blind has just completed at 111 East Fifty-ninth Street. This building, which is both a club house and a settlement for the blind, has been fashioned on the basis of experiments made in all parts of the world for the comfort of those who cannot see, and the presence of many men of importance will serve to make the dedication impressive.

At these exercises Joseph H. Choate will preside. Mgr. Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, will offer the opening prayer, Rabbi Magnes will read from the Psalms, and Bishop David H. Greer will deliver the benediction. President Taft will make an address. He has taken a deep interest in this work of Miss Winifred Holt and her association, and he laid the cornerstone for the Lighthouse a year ago. President Finley of City College, who is also the President of the association, will have something to say, and certainly no speaker will be listened to with closer attention than Helen Keller.

Other speakers will be Miss Holt, Superintendent Maxwell of the Public Schools; Eben P. Morford, a blind man who is President of the American Association of Workers for the Blind, and President W. I. Scandlin of the Blind Men's Club.

When President Taft arrives at the Lighthouse a delegation of blind Boy Scouts will meet him and serve as his escort to the seat of honor. Then, following the speechmaking, a dramatic club of blind boys and girls will give "The Blind Unchained," a miracle play, written for this celebration by Miss Holt and Carolyn Wells. These children have been rehearsing faithfully under the direction of Edith Wynne Matthison.

After the military drill by blind Boy Scouts there will come the inspection of the Lighthouse, with President Taft escorted to each corner of each of its floors. But that it is ready to show to him and to the public does not mean that it is all paid for. Although the building will be open for daily use next Monday, the association needs $100,000 to put the Lighthouse on a firm financial basis. There is a mortgage of $40,000 that must be paid, and there will be need of $60,000 for further equipment and to meet the operating expenses.

The Lighthouse is a place where the sightless may meet socially. It is also a settlement equipped with the means for instruction in sewing, reading, weaving, stenography, dancing, gymnastics and many other things designed to make the world a little easier place for the blind. The Lighthouse has its gymnasium, its library, its swimming pool and bowling alleys, its restaurant and its museum which will set forth the history of the "emancipation of the blind."

Miss Holt has put into the plans for the now finished Lighthouse a number of ideas which she picked up in her travels abroad. The basement bowling alleys, for instance, are copied from the bowling alleys for the blind in Vienna; the swimming pool is built in imitation of a pool in Prague much enjoyed by the blind folk of that city. A home for blind girls supplied the model for the roof garden and "cloister" fire escape. This fire escape is wide and made of steel, with flooring of reinforced concrete. It extends out over the back court in a hollow square so roomy that in fair weather it can be used as an open-air working pavilion.

One interesting feature of construction is the absence of angles and sharp corners. Everything is in curves, which will not only smooth the coming and going of the sightless, but make the cleaning of the Lighthouse a simpler task.

The big assembly hall can be cleared for evening entertainments. Another large apartment in the building is the salesroom, where the blind may bring their handiwork to market and where they may make application for employment. The library will keep on hand a supply of current literature concerning the blind world, both in ink print as well as Braille, New York Point, Moon and other raised types.

Guests at Economic Club's Dinner.

Mayor Gaynor will deliver an address on "Efficient City Government" at the Economic Club's third dinner of the season at the Hotel Astor on next Monday evening, Feb. 24. Other speakers on the same subject will be Rudolph Blankenburg, Mayor of Philadelphia, and Henry T. Hunt, Mayor of Cincinnati. James Speyer, President of the club, will preside. Count Johann von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the United States, and Walter Fisher, Secretary of the Interior, will be the guests of honor.

BOY SCOUTS TRAIL SHOOTER.

Cause His Arrest After Giving First Aid to His Victim.

A score or more of Boy Scouts from Christ Episcopal Church, Seventy-fourth Street and Second Avenue, Brooklyn, saw a crowd of small boys annoying a man dressed as a cowboy as he walked down Sixth Avenue, near Sixty-fifth Street, yesterday afternoon, and they saw the man draw a revolver, fire once in the air, and then once into the crowd of boys. One of the boys dropped and the man ran.

At his heels went some of the Boy Scouts, while others carried the injured boy, Frank Stecho, fifteen years old, of 670 Sixty-fifth Street, to the office of Dr. Henry McGowan at 9,521 Fourth Avenue, where the physician dressed a wound in the boy's right arm.

The other boys trailed the fugitive to 767 Sixtieth Street, and while some of them watched the house to see that he did not escape others went to the Fort Hamilton Police Station, told what they had seen and done, and led Detectives Henne and Dwyer back to the house. The fugitive was found hiding behind a chimney on the roof.

He said he was Joseph Virginia, a Mexican, and a moving picture actor. He was dressed as a cowboy and wore a gun in his belt. He said he had posed for some pictures in Dyker Meadows yesterday afternoon and was annoyed by the boys on his way home. He said he had not meant to hurt any of the youngsters, but had been so enraged that he did not know what he was doing when he fired.

POISON TO SPITE PARENTS.

Boy a Prisoner in Hospital for Attempting Suicide.

Paul Wolfe, a 19-year-old clerk of 514 West 162d Street, was taken to the Washington Heights Hospital last night a prisoner, for attempting suicide by swallowing a weak solution of bromide of potassium. The boy's mother found him in agony in his bedroom and called Patrolman Flood of the West 152d Street Station.

Dr. Scherr took the young man to the hospital, where it is said that he would recover. The police say young Wolfe took the poison following a quarrel with his parents.
